M'ADOO ASKS LAW TO HELP SALES OF LIBERTY BONDS

Wants Income from $30,000 of Fourth, with $45,000 of Previous Loans, Tax Exempt.

IMMEDIATE ACTION URGED

Relief Imperative Before Campaign Starts Sept. 28 if New Loan Is Not to be Impaired.

Foreign Exchange and Bank Loan Changes—Canadian Plan to Stabilize War Bonds.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 10.—Secretary McAdoo late this afternoon called on Congress for the immediate enactment of financial legislation of far-reaching consequences as affecting the marketing of Government war bonds, the flexibility of the Treasury's operations respecting the stabilization of foreign exchange, and other matters directly involved in America's war finance plans.

The legislation Mr. McAdoo recommends calls for a limited exemption from income surtax, war and excess profits taxation of the income to be derived from the Fourth Liberty Loan bond issue, the flotation of which opens on Sept. 28. He also asks for legislation to free a larger portion of the income from the First, Second, and Third Liberty Loan issues from similar taxation.

Eighteen days will elapse before the opening of the new bond campaign for the sale of approximately $5,500,000,000 or $6,000,000,000 of Government war securities. Secretary McAdoo makes a most urgent plea for immediate action by Congress.

"I believe that immediate action should be taken," said the Secretary of the Treasury in a letter to Committee Chairmen Kitchin and Simmons urging the legislation, "so that the status of the bonds of the Fourth Liberty Loan in respect to taxation may be promptly known. It is, in fact, imperative that this status should be quickly known."

Submits Tentative Draft of Bill.

The tentative draft of a bill embodying the recommendations of the Administration was sent to Chairman Kitchin of the Ways and Means Committee this afternoon. It was accompanied by a letter from Secretary McAdoo in which he summarized the situation confronting the Government in the forthcoming campaign for the sale of war bonds. Copies of the bill and the letter were also sent to Senator Simmons, Chairman of the Finance Committee.

Members of both Senate and House committees are tonight carefully studying the recommendations made by Mr. McAdoo. The bill was submitted without previous notice. Members of both committees, before reading its text and Mr. McAdoo's letter, were unwilling to comment on the proposed legislation.

Congress will give prompt consideration to the recommendations made. Chairman Kitchin tonight issued a call for a meeting of the Ways and Means Committee for 10 o'clock tomorrow morning to consider the bill. As Mr. McAdoo insists upon the need of action before Sept. 28, it is probable that a measure embodying the legislation sought by the Administration will be promptly reported as a separate measure, temporarily displacing consideration of the $8,000,000,000 War Revenue bill, which cannot be passed until after the loan campaign has begun.

In his appeal for prompt action Mr. McAdoo says the delay in the enactment of the new war tax bill, with the fact that the income surtaxes will be higher, materially affect the prospects of the Fourth Liberty Loan. He points out that the market price of Liberty bonds "was depressed by newspaper reports of a greatly increased surtax," to which interest on the bonds would be subject, and that he has been anxious to stabilize the interest rate on Government bonds. The legislation recommended by Mr. Adoo may be briefly stated as follows:

Legislation Recommended.

First—That interest on Fourth Liberty bonds, not more than $30,000 of which are owned by any person or firm, be exempt from the graduated additional income taxes and excess profits and war profits taxes.

Second—That interest on First, Second, and Third Liberty bonds, not more than $45,000 of which are owned by any person or firm, be exempt from the same taxes.

Third—That the War Savings Stamps may be issued to an aggregate of $4,-

All German Admiralty Chiefs Assembling at Headquarters

AMSTERDAM, Sept. 10. — The Chief of the German Admiralty Staff, Admiral Scheer, has gone to stay permanently at Main Headquarters, according to advices from Berlin. The staff of the Naval War Commander and other heads of Admiralty departments will also be located at Headquarters.

FIRST MEN CALLED TO BE 19-20, 32-36

Crowder Says Many Thousands Probably Will Be Needed at Camps in October.

36 TO 45 EARLY NEXT YEAR

Provost Marshal General Urges All Employers to Assist the Draft Officials.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 10.—Youths who are 19 and 20 years old and men between 32 and 36 years, inclusive, will be the first subject to call for military service under the new selective service legislation, and it is probable that many thousands of them will be needed to fill the cantonments next month.

As to the boys of 18 and the men between 36 and 45, General Crowder said that full information would be published as soon as the War Department's completed program had been prepared. It is probable that about 150,000 of the boys—and among these will be some of 19 and 20—will be sent to students' training camps. It seems unlikely at this time that any call will be made upon men from 36 to 45 for active service, at least before January or February.

To speed up the work of classifying the registrants who will be subject to immediate call, the questionnaires will first be sent to those of 19 and 20 and those between 32 and 36.

To Rush Classification.

General Crowder hopes to get the work of classification in these age groups completed within forty-five or fifty days after registration on Thursday. The first of the early calls for active military service will be made upon the men included in these age groups who do not claim exemption and to whom no deferred classification is granted at the request of employers or others.

General Crowder said that the needs of the cantonments this month practically would exhaust the registrants in Class 1 under the earlier selective service legislation. He referred to the number who would be left over after the September quotas were filled as "negligible." In fact, they will represent only a few who have been made available by the recent combing over of the classification lists.

As to the number of men who will be needed to fill the cantonments in October, General Crowder was not prepared to make a statement. It probably will not be under 270,000, the total determined upon for September, and may be considerably in excess of that figure. One guess has put the call at 300,000.

To select this number of men out of those who will register on Thursday will require rapid work by all officials connected with the selective service machinery, and this emergency, General Crowder believes, makes it a patriotic duty for all employers and other representatives of industry to devote themselves to supplying such aid as they can in properly classifying the registrants.

It is General Crowder's hope that the local boards will prepare their reports on Thursday and that they will be forwarded to the Adjutant General's offices the following day. Reports to the Provost Marshal General's office by the Adjutant Generals are looked for within two days. By that time the serial numbers will be completed and the questionnaires will be rushed out to the registrants.

Youths to Be in Majority.

The officials expect that the larger number of men called into active service will be from the 19 and 20 classes and that the percentage of deferred classifications to be granted to men from 32 upward will be larger in proportion to the total registered than in the earlier drafts. It is estimated that about 3,000,000 of the younger men will register under the present draft. The War Department's estimate contemplates taking about 601,000 of the 2,300,000 men who will be needed by next June, from those between 32 and 45.

The youths, including those of 18, who will be sent to the students' training camps at the 400 or more schools selected by the Government, will be inducted into service upon their entry to the camps. General Crowder would not discuss the details of these training camps or the methods to be employed in selecting the candidates for them as this feature of the program is in the hands of other War Department agencies.

Concerning the duty of the employers and other representatives of industry, General Crowder issued a formal appeal which he hoped would receive the closest attention of those whom he addressed. His appeal follows:

"The time has come when I must ad-

NEW PEACE OFFER BY BURIAN IN TALK TO GERMANS

READY FOR CONCILIATION

D'ECKSTAD IS PESSIMISTIC

Saxon Foreign Minister Expresses Concern Over Tottering of Popular Confidence.

AMSTERDAM, Sept. 10.—An exchange of views between the Central Powers and the Entente was tentatively suggested by Baron Burian, the Austro-Hungarian Foreign Minister, in an address to visiting German newspaper men, according to a Vienna dispatch today. Such a discussion, said the Foreign Minister, need not take the form of peace negotiations, but would have as its purpose the consideration of all things which are keeping the belligerent powers apart.

"This question arises," said the Foreign Minister: "Isn't it a crime against humanity even to think of completely pulling down a structure which has become historical, and which certainly here and there needs improvement, but is only capable of improvement, in order to found a paradise in future on its ruins? The defect in this, however, is that in accordance with the destructive methods of our enemies it can only be created with a much too great sacrifice.

"Count the past hecatombs of this war. Think of those to come and ask whether striving to attain war aims at such a price is justifiable—war aims in which the principle of justice is put foremost—without investigating whether an understanding could not be reached by a fair application of that principle.

"It is unthinkable that even the most confident hopes of final victory could permit the enemy in the long run to avoid considering whether the most terrific exertions and sacrifices can longer be justified in order to carry through principles which are not the enemy's monopoly or to regulate the affairs of other peoples who can manage them quite as well themselves.

"Fighting For Imaginary Things."

"I believe that careful and sincere investigation would bring many on the other side to realize that they often are fighting for imaginary things. It may be an ungrateful task to want to communicate one's own perceptions of things to the enemy.

"The enemy group can, if it wishes, convince itself that in all questions of humanity and justice and of future international relations it will encounter on the part of our group no opposition and will be in line with our existing progressive aspirations. But at the same time it will meet our determination to continue steadfastly to stand up for our good right.

"Our adversaries need only provide an opportunity in a calm exchange of views—some sort of direct informative discussions is thinkable which would be far from being peace negotiations—of discussing and weighing everything which today separates the belligerent parties, and no further fighting will, perhaps, be needed to bring them closer together.

"But I would not delude you with baseless prospects of peace at a moment when the war fever still is shaking the world. I must, however, talk to you of peace because we all honestly want it and because we are certain there is an ever-growing number of like-minded persons in all enemy countries.

"We desire to contribute to the best of our ability to a mutual understanding and help to pave a way for conciliation. But, so long as necessary, we shall hold out in a loyal and resolute joint defense."

Baron Burian is also quoted as saying: "I am certain that this war must cost this tormented earth a terrible amount of bloodshed and an immeasurable destruction of precious possessions before the end can be reached by the military overthrow of the enemy, if, indeed, this at all is possible.

Continuing, the Foreign Minister said: "We are oppressed by the same cares, but we are not downhearted. You can convince yourself here that we, just as in Germany, with head erect and without fear or arrogance, are waging a defensive war, rejecting all responsibility for the prolongation thereof, which was criminally and quite uselessly forced upon us by the enemy.

"No party can be sure of the issue until the end of a war, but it is not to be expected that either party should renounce the possibility of a military victory."

Baron Burian concluded by exhorting the press to co-operate in the task of cultivating this spirit which, he said,

Allied Gains Alarm Austria; Women Riot as Troops Leave

LONDON, Sept. 10.—The continued advance of the Entente Allies on the battlefront in France is making a profound impression on Austria-Hungary, according to a dispatch from Zurich to The Evening Star. The recent departure of Austrian troops from Vienna caused riotous scenes in the Austrian capital.

Thousands of angry women, the dispatch says, raided the railway stations, protesting against the departure of the men.

BIG U-BOAT SUNK, CAPTAIN REPORTS

Navy Department, Without Comment, Makes Public Story of Fight.

29TH SHOT DID THE WORK

American Says There Was "a Terrific Explosion and She Sank Almost Instantly."

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 10.—The sinking of a large German submarine camouflaged and flying no flag, far out in the Atlantic Ocean on the morning of Sept. 3 by the American tank steamer Frank H. Buck, was officially reported to the Navy Department tonight. So far, the department has received by long distance telephone from an Atlantic port only a summary of the statements made to naval officers by the Captain of the Buck. His official report has not yet treached the department.

According to the summary of the Captain's statement, the engagement between the submarine and the tanker lasted twenty-nine minutes. Direct hits were registered against the stern and conning tower of the U-boat by the twenty-eighth and twenty-ninth shots from the American steamer.

No Official Comment.

The Captain's report makes the most definite statement that has yet been given of the sinking of a German submarine by an American vessel since the capture by the American destroyer Fanning of a German U-boat which afterward sank. The department refrained from commenting on the Captain's report, beyond saying that the Captain highly commends the efficiency and conduct of Chief Gunner's Mate Joseph Steffens of the United States Navy, and the whole naval gun crew under his command. The summary of the statement made by the Captain follows:

"On Sept. 3, at 8:25 A. M., an enemy submarine was sighted on the starboard beam at 14,000 yards. The submarine opened fire with two 6-inch guns. We answered fire with forward gun. We saw the shot fall about 400 yards short, and immediately swung stern forward to submarine, using after gun. Our shots were very close to the submarine, and the submarine's shrapnel was bursting very near to us, some of the pieces falling upon our decks amidship. We changed our course frequently, which seemed to upset the submarine's aim and range. As soon as the submarine saw our range was equal to hers, she hauled away from us. Up to that time she had been closing in on us.

"Before the submarine could get out of range our twenty-eighth shot from the after gun apparently hit her stern. The twenty-ninth shot hit her just forward of the conning tower, near and under the waterline. The bow immediately shot up into the air very suddenly, then settled and went down out of sight, the stern making a half turn toward us and then it disappeared.

Sank Almost Instantly.

"Upon shot striking the submarine we saw very closely a terrific explosion and black smoke, which enveloped the submarine. I am positive that we destroyed her, as she sank almost instantly after the shot struck her.

"The engagement lasted twenty-nine minutes. Some of the fragments of the submarine fell on our deck and were picked up. The submarine was about 300 feet long, of the early type of German submarine, with high bow, and had two 6-inch guns close to the conning tower, fore and aft. She fired in salvos, using about sixty shots altogether. She was camouflaged and flew no flag."

TRANSPORT, RETURNING, REPORTED TORPEDOED

It was reported in marine insurance circles yesterday that the Canadian Pacific passenger liner Missanable had been torpedoed on Monday, westbound from an English port, with passengers nd mails on board for the United States. The liner left an American port with troops four weeks ago and was commanded by Captain William Hains. She carried a crew of about 200 officers and men. No particulars were received as to loss of life.

The Missanable was a fine twin-screw steamship built at Glasgow in 1914 for the one-class cabin and third-class passenger trade of the Canadian Pacific steamship lines between London and Montreal, and had been taken by the Admiralty for carrying American troops to England. She was 12,469 gross tonnage, 500 feet long, 64 feet beam, 38 feet depth of hold, and had an average speed under favorable conditions of 17 knots.

WITH THE BRITISH ARMY, Sept. 10.—Rainstorms, very heavy while they last, between short spells of wind-swept sunshine, have fallen along the front and our men are having a wet time on those old battlefields which again stretch for miles behind our lines—our recovered ground; good to us not because of any beauty, for there is none, but because it is the wide area for which our men fought through these years of war.

Their chief labor now is to mend the roads which strike across that desolation and to make easy the lines of communication which are the arteries of our material body of war, and to make some form of habitation in this wilderness so that men may get shelter from wind and the headquarters staffs of divisions and battalions may have dry places in which to spread their maps and write their orders. It is an enormous labor, and our engineers and the pioneers and labor battalions are hard at work in the rain and mud that already is forming a sludge over all this ground, making old dugouts habitable again, draining old trenches, putting up new huts in place of those which have been burned or destroyed by shellfire.

Here and there the enemy's retreat has been too hurried for him to indulge in elaborate destruction. We found large numbers of new German dugouts, very deep and well timbered. Recent captured orders from army Generals forbid German officers to let their men use dugouts more than eight steps down, and instructing them to board up or otherwise destroy the deeper kind, in which their men have been too often trapped by our attacks.

Rain May Check Illness.

The rain that is falling will increase the discomfort of our men in the open fields now that we have to go long distances without villages or roofs behind us, while the enemy has good places for billets behind his own lines. But in another way it is a blessing, for it will lay the dust, which is the source of evil to the health of our troops now that it comes blowing over battlefields strewn with dead horses and all corruption that is in the wake of war.

This beyond doubt is the cause of internal pains and troubles amounting to a mild form of dysentery which recently affected some of our troops and in greater degree, because of poorer nourishment, the German infantry. It is a marvel due to the perfection of our medical science that there has been no widespread epidemic this Summer of a more serious character than "flu," or Spanish influenza and other allied fevers, more especially as the strain on our officers and men has been very severe since the beginning of the German offensive in March.

It is now that the strain is relaxed a little that some of them who carried on so doggedly begin to "feel done in," and into our rest hospitals and casualty clearing stations there come drifting in now and

Sick Germans Forced to Fight in Front Line; Americans Capture One Who Tells of Man Shortage

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, Sept. 10, (Associated Press.)—A German soldier captured with others in a trench south of the Aisne was found to be suffering from a diseased condition of the ear and anaemia. He told the American medical officers that he had been forced to do front line duty notwithstanding his condition. Until a few weeks ago he had been employed in a noncombatant position, owing to his affliction, but a recent order had caused him to be sent to do duty on the western front.

The prisoner said that he was in the first line in Flanders and arrived opposite the Americans five days ago. He knew of cases where Germans not sick enough to go to hospitals were being used in the supply of other departments back of the lines, and declared that in a number of instances soldiers suffering from serious illness had been sent to the front lines, as he had been.

This prisoner is now in an American hospital and may have to undergo an operation for abscess, owing to the long standing nature of his ailment and the anaemic condition of his body brought about by the hardships of war.

Plan of Campaign Is to Destroy All Shelter for Allies During Winter.

WITH THE FRENCH ARMIES, Sept. 10.—French patrols were at Travecy on the Oise north of La Fère this morning. Over the whole front on both sides of St. Quentin the armies of Generals Debeney and Humbert are approaching or already have reached the allied trenches of the middle of March. A very heavy downpour of rain this morning suggested the fall of a theatre curtain upon a completed act.

We are, however, not yet back everywhere upon the positions of six months ago, for the enemy is holding obstinately to the eastern corner of the hills between the Vesle and the Aisne, and, except on the west about Laffaux, General Mangin is not yet near the Chemin des Dames.

The troops will be very grateful for the brightening of the weather this afternoon, for the field of the French advance toward St. Quentin and St. Gobain is now a wilderness in which there is not the least shelter and scarcely any fuel is to be found. I notice that authorized writers in the German press glory in this fact.

"A decisive struggle," says Colonel Gaedke, "will be made more difficult for the enemy by the devastation of the regions that now form a buckler before the German armies and all contribute to their successful defense." An official Wolff message of Sept. 1 says the Allies "will find for Winter only ground completely bare and devastated," and on the following day the same agency remarked: "The abandonment of this sector [north of the Oise] was prepared with our customary care, and we have been able without being interrupted to take away from this region everything that would be of any use to the adversary."

"The customary care" of the German Army from the highest to the lowest commands in the execution of acts of wholesale destruction and of theft is a characteristic to which since the beginning of the war I have often had to testify, at first with reluctance, afterward with a deepening, and now a long confirmed, disgust. The popular term of Hun misrepresents the facts; these are not acts of savagery, but coldblooded and highly scientific rapine. They are not accidental, but fundamental parts of the German campaign. Cities like Noyon and scores of villages sometimes, it is true, were much damaged by bombardment, but have afterward been completely razed by fire and explosive. However, every useful article had been first removed.

PARIS EXPECTS NEW BLOW BY FOCH

FOE STRENGTHENS OLD LINE

PARIS, Sept. 10.—As Paris sees it, the first part of Foch's program has been accomplished. The Germans have been compelled to fall back along the whole line from Arras to Rheims and have lost practically every inch of ground they gained by their four great drives begun on March 21 and ended on July 18, the day Foch struck his tremendous blow on their flank between the Aisne and the Marne.

So far, the last eight weeks have marked undoubtedly a great allied victory. But it is well to note that no unduly optimistic conclusions must be drawn from this fact. To state the situation coldly this morning the enemy even now has not been driven right back to the Hindenburg line, either immediately to the west of Cambrai, or around St. Quentin, and even when he is, it is by no means certain that the Allies will not have the hardest part of their immediate task before them.

On the other hand, the fall of La Fère, which has been in flames since Thursday, may be expected in the very near future. This will open widely the prospect of the powerful position of St. Gobain Heights being turned from the north, while the fact that Mangin is steadily biting into the German defense near Servais, must soon enable him to secure St. Gobain town and its important railway junctions.

Temporary Obstacle in Floods.

The question arises whether, after destroying their stores at La Fère, the enemy will be able to inundate any substantial part of the adjacent country and there delay Mangin's advance in the same way as they have been able to hamper Horne's progress in the Sensée region. Even if they are able to do this, however, the continued progress of Mangin's enveloping movement toward Anizy on the south of the St. Gobain forest will probably very shortly render the enemy possession of this cornerstone of his positions in this district untenable, and will bring about a radical change in the whole strategical position.

Opinion in many quarters here is inclined to the belief that now that the enemy has to a great extent reached the Hindenburg line, we may regard the present offensive as ended. This view, however, by no means is shared by well-informed persons. It is known that the Germans have immensely strengthened their defenses, and particularly their means of communication. Practically all the railways behind their new lines have been doubled and many new sidings laid down. Every station is crowded with trucks, filled with munitions and supplies.

All their old positions have been strengthened. Behind St. Quentin especially, powerful new trenches have been created all along the canal and everywhere vast new systems of barbed wire have been set up.

The most notable feature of the new works perhaps is the enormous number of shelters which have been constructed in reinforced concrete, both

BRITISH FIGHT IN A STORM

Beat Off German Attacks West of Cambrai and Move Line Slightly Forward.

LONDON, Sept. 10.—The French armies have made important progress in the last twenty-four hours in tightening their grip on the approaches to St. Quentin and La Fère. By the capture of Roupy they are now four and a half miles from St. Quentin on the southwest, and tonight it is announced that they have passed beyond Hinacourt, seven miles south of the city.

Their maximum advance at Roupy from their previous line is three and a half miles. They command all the approaches to the city from the north, west, and south.

On the west and south the French have captured a string of important positions, including Gibercourt, Remigny, Montescourt, Lizerolles, Clastres, Seraucourt-le-Grand, and Etreillers.

South of the Oise General Mangin's army has captured Servais, where the French are almost directly against the Hindenburg line. Wooded areas within two miles of La Fère have been occupied.

Strong resistance was encountered in these advances, but the progress of the French has been continuous in the whole region between St. Quentin and La Fère.

North of Laffaux, opposite the end of the Chemin des Dames, the French have also improved their positions. A slight advance has been made in the region of Glennis, south of the Aisne, where the American troops are co-operating.

Further north the British have been occupied chiefly in straightening their lines, continued rains having impeded operations. They have advanced south of Havrincourt in the direction of Cambrai, from which they are less than seven miles distant, and have beaten off German attacks west of Gouzeaucourt. There has also been heavy fighting at Epehy.

In their new positions the British have a wedge pointing toward Douai, where fires started by the Germans are reported to be burning still.

On the Lys front the British have made progress northeast of Neuve Chapelle and north of Armentières.

The Belgians, it is announced, have scored a marked success on their small sector of the front. On the Steenstraete-Dixmude road they have advanced more than half a mile on a front of about a mile and a quarter, and southwest of St. Julien they entered the German lines to a depth of a third of a mile on a front of more than two miles, holding their gains in both instances.

BRITISH STRAIGHTEN NEW ADVANCE LINES

German Rear Guards Resist Strongly on a Field Covered with Mud.

WITH THE BRITISH ARMY IN FRANCE, Sept. 10, (Associated Press.)—Although the resistance from enemy rear guards has increased all along the line, especially in the centre areas, where a much greater volume of machine gun and artillery fire is being encountered, the British troops have made further progress. Rain has fallen incessantly. The battlefield in many places is now covered with soft mud, and the shell craters are filled with ooze, which makes rapid progress difficult.

Generally the armies are still paused, and what forward movements have been carried out have been more in the nature of straightening the line and for the suppression of active German positions.

Epehy Wood has been the scene of hard fighting. The British attacked it today, but details are lacking.

From a number of reliable sources it is learned that the enemy is evacuating the civilians from numerous villages and towns in his rear and is exhibiting his customary methods while doing it. The civilians, in most cases old men, women and children, are being forced from their homes with only a handful of their possessions; their property is either being confiscated by the German authorities or being carried off by the troops.

Bavarian Mutiny Reported.

Further confirmation of the mutinous spirit in sections of the German Army has been received. Prisoners who were in the immediate vicinity of an engagement on Aug. 22 say that the men of an infantry regiment of a Bavarian division suddenly threw down their arms. They retired, declaring that they absoluteyl refuse to fight for Prussia any longer.

In addition to other troubles, which seem to have been multiplying of late, the German commanders have now suddenly come to realize that their system of defense with respect to depth is totally inadequate under the conditions encountered in continuous fighting. A captured Seventeenth German Army order says:

"A new outpost zone cannot be selected daily and the troops must hold the foremost line. The troops must understand this, or they will retire against the wishes of the command and describe the ground which they have lost as an evacuated outpost zone. This cannot be permitted for tactical reasons and must not be allowed for moral reasons."

The most important news from the north today is direct corroboration of the fact that the Germans are working with all haste in the preparation of their rear lines east of the River Lys and that they are being reinforced with concrete machine gun nests in considerable numbers.

Anzacs Advance in Storm.

The line northeast and southeast of Hesbecourt, east of Roisel, has been advanced by Australian troops in a driving storm, and posts have been established well to the eastward of the former front. In the same general locality the British forward movement continues today.

The Germans seem to have thrown in more machine-gunners here, and, as they came from fresh divisions, they are holding out a little better than the troops they relieved, who had become so fatigued or disheartened that some of them during recent days surrendered without firing a shot when they saw the British advancing.

The Germans delivered a number of counterstrokes, but all except one broke down. In one attack the Germans penetrated the forward British positions, but the line was immediately restored without much difficulty.

Heavy artillery firing is reported, especially from the German big guns in the valley of the River Scarpe.

British troops have now drawn their lines closer about the coal centre of Lens.

The British line northeast of Nieppe, in the Lys salient, was advanced during the night and the British positions in the Ploegsteert region were improved. Kemmel is under fire from the enemy guns.

North of La Bassée the Germans evidently are trying out the British strength. They have made three attacks on the British posts, but each time they were repulsed with heavy losses.

then very tired young men who, in answer to the most cheery question, "Well, and what's the matter with you?" say "Nothing very definite. I feel a bit queer, that's all. Found it hard to carry on, somehow."

They have erratic pulses, temperatures that zigzag up and down the chart, and a lassitude that keeps them quiet on their beds as patient as babes with a thermometer stuck in their mouths. But they brighten up towards evening, when they spin yarns to each other across the wards, strange, astounding yarns as I have heard them for several days past in one such hospital told by young officers who were at school four years ago, and who during the last four years, even during the last four months, have crammed into life a hundred years of intense experience.

One Boy's Amazing Experiences.

Here in one of these wards one hears the inner history of war and the revelation of its effects on the minds of men, and episodes of frightful adventure, told quietly by one man to another, as though they were normal things or dreams vividly remembered. One boy of 22½ years has been all through Gallipoli, been cut off in a horseshoe trench below Achi Baba, seen some of his comrades go raving mad with thirst, jumping over the parapet and running towards the Turkish machine guns while he had kept sane chewing a button from his sporran until his tongue glued to the roof of his mouth and then, in the evening of the burning day, volunteered to go with five others to fetch water from the lines further back.

They went singly. The first man was shot, the second got through, the third was shot, the fourth got through, and when this boy's turn came he was number five, and the odd numbers had been unlucky, but he pushed through and brought back water. That is an old memory of his.

In the 51st Division he has been through many battles in France, in all of them since those of Arras last year, and on the French front as well as on the British, until this last fighting on the Scarpe a week ago. Then he felt "funny," as he calls it, and fainted for nothing at all, and now lies yarning in a ward, with little gusts of laughter at odd happenings which he remembers. The others carry on.

On the whole the health of the army is magnificent and the spirit of the men high. The outposts are still pushing forward and meeting fiercer resistance from the German rearguards, fighting here and there more than patrol actions, and small battles which have been thought big battles as far back as the South African war, and repelling German counterattacks which are intended to delay our progress until their line of retreat and of main resistance is assured.

So it was yesterday when the Germans made two determined counterattacks at Chapel Hill and its neighborhood near Gouzeaucourt.

Th e efforts were made by men of the 201st German Division and 6th Cavalry Division, after what seems to have been a time of friction and dispute between them. According to one story the 201st Division had been badly mauled and the survivors were so low spirited that their officers sent word that a counterattack by them was out of the question. Then the 6th Cavalry Division said, "If the infantry won't fight neither will the cavalry."

Yet they were forced to do so by stern command, and came forward yesterday and gained some ground from our outposts. They were beaten out once and came back again and were driven out again, losing fifty prisoners to our men and suffering heavy casualties.

New Zealanders further north took seventy prisoners, and this morning British troops attacked south of Epehy and pushed back the German rearguard lines, though how much I do not know. It seems evident that the Germans are still fighting rearguard actions east of Péronne before falling back definitely to the old line of defense before March 21, and that they are not yet on their real line of resistance.

For the moment our warfare is restricted to these minor actions, clearing the country of German outpost lines and driving the enemy back to his new battle lines where he was established before he plunged into his great adventure in the Spring, flinging all he had into the issue, and lost his last chance of victory on the western front.

The problem that faces him now is whether he will have enough men to hold this line with any safety during the next four or five months, when his shattered divisions will be largely made up of his boys of the 1920 class, or whether he will be forced to shorten his line still further and dodge the next blows in store for him—the American Army has not yet tried its strength—by a retreat on a greater scale. It is an appalling problem for the German command to settle, with low-spirited troops in the field and despairing people at home.

WILDERNESS ALL FOE LEAVES BEHIND

By G. H. PERRIS.

away from Noyon on Sunday one of the German notice boards directing the soldiery to the "Korps Beutesammelstelle," or loot store, which is conveniently fixed near the station. Detailed instructions lie before me for the seizure throughout the occupied country of the wool filling of mattresses and cushions, of which it is stated 10,000 tons already had been obtained on July 3, and from which millions of uniforms had been made.

Instances like this could be multiplied indefinitely. It is a western replica of the indemnity of six milliards which the same men are squeezing out of Russia through the Bolshevist preachers of the formula, "No annexations, no indemnities."

Noyon a Battered Ruin.

Sept. 8.—The tide of war that has here flowed and ebbed thrice has left peculiarly horrible marks in the triangle between the Oise, the Aisne, and the Ailette. The countryside itself, outside of the old front from Noyon to Soissons, is not disfigured as badly as the battlefields of the Somme or Verdun, but the villages and small towns, farms and large country houses are smashed to bits with a very few partial exceptions, and in passing through them one asks what body of men will have the courage and means to attempt the reconstruction of the region.

I spent a long time yesterday evening in the ruins of Noyon. Notice boards still stand at the entry to the main streets, warning the visitor of danger from mines and other boche traps, but there is probably now more risk from the patches of wall that a strong wind would bring down. Briefly, the whole city is destroyed. I did not see half a dozen houses that could be repaired.

Pleasant villas, old-fashioned streets of crowded shops, mansions built around aged courtyards, schools, churches, convents—they are lying in nearly unrecognizable piles of stone, brick, plaster, wood, and general dust. There is very little trace of furniture, and most, if not all of it, must have been carted away to Germany.

The cathedral, because it was the most substantial building in the town, shows most of itself still standing, and having been characterized rather by strength than delicate beauty of structure, is not beyond repair. Its great, square towers are, however, gutted. Five shellholes in the roof of the nave and others in the roof of the apse and the transepts, have brought down masses of masonry. All the windows are shattered and the altars of nearly all the side chapels are broken. There is a foul litter of broken stone, wood, and glass with feathers, scraps of German newspapers, and twisted petty utensils.

Of the quaint, Renaissance town half is gutted by fire, and its gilded façades completely spoiled. No French civilians remained in this or other towns and villages to give us such tales as they did last year. It is one vast, empty desolation, silent and yet in its lifelessness only too eloquent.

THRILLING AIR FIGHTS ON BRITISH FRONT

WITH THE BRITISH ARMY IN FRANCE, Sept. 10, (Associated Press.)—Amazing feats by British airmen during the recent fighting may now be mentioned. After driving down in flames one of two enemy two-seaters, a British scout had engine failure, which compelled him to spin down. As the machine touched the ground a German fired his pistol at the pilot at fifteen yards' range, puncturing the gasoline tank.

At that moment the engine picked up sufficiently to carry the pilot to the rear of the British lines, where he was forced to come down again. Being under a heavy fire he removed the gunlocks and sights and all his instruments before abandoning his machine, which could not be saved.

A pilot and observer, returning in their machine from a bombing raid, fell behind their formation because of engine trouble and were attacked by Fokkers. The elevator controls were immediately shot away and the observer was badly wounded, but he continued to fight and shot down one Fokker in flames and saw another crash out of control. By this time all the gasoline tanks had been shot through and the engine hit in several places. All the instruments on the dashboard were smashed by enemy bullets. Both rear guns were jammed, and the observer was bleeding badly.

The pilot succeeded in getting his machine into a dive, went through a cloud, and reached the British lines. The gallant observer was found to have been wounded ten times in the fight.

Attacked by a squadron of enemy airplanes, a lone British scout spun downward, but on the way saw that only one of the enemy was following him. So he came suddenly out of the spin just above a grove of trees, caught the enemy machine crossing in front of him, and shot it to the earth, where it burst into flames.

There are many stories, too, of how British airmen swooped back and forth over the German batteries, playing their guns on the enemy until these guns were completely silenced. One report winds up by saying that a scout machine crossed a battery position several times, but was not fired upon, all the gunners apparently having been killed.

Such tactics as these aided materially in making the recent British victories possible. One British scout sailed over an enemy "sausage," made a dive, and finished off two German sentry airplanes, then fired on the "sausage," which was being hauled down, and finally wound up the performance by dropping two bombs squarely on the winch used in raising and lowering the balloon.

There are many instances where an observer crawled out on the wings and stopped bullet holes in the gas tanks with his fingers, a handkerchief or a glove. One machine had its starboard top and bottom planes broken by anti-aircraft fire. The observer leaned over the side of the fusilage, holding a machine gun in his hands and thus maintained the balance and enabled the airplane to land safely, although all the controls except the elevator were useless.

Another machine had its gas tank punctured by a bullet and the pilot was wounded in the leg. The fusilage burst into flames, but the observer kept the fire under control from a great altitude with a small extinguisher until the machine was brought to earth, where it blazed up, the observer rescuing the wounded pilot just in time to save his life.

There is an increasing number of cases in which British pilots have attacked enemy night bombers caught in searchlight beams. In every case reported the enemy has been shot down. During one fight well inside the German lines the pilot was wounded badly, but the observer from the rear seat leaned over and with his right hand helped to bring the machine safely back, while with his left he fired occasional bursts from his machine gun at the pursuing enemy airplanes.

Many times the wings of German machines have broken off in the air during a fight, indicating the faulty material which the Germans are now forced to use in the construction of their airplanes.

ST. GOBAIN STRONGHOLD NOW TIGHTLY PRESSED

French Sweep Forward for Important Gains Southward from St. Quentin.

WITH THE FRENCH ARMY, Sept. 9, (Associated Press.)—French troops forced the crossing of the Crozat Canal today, overcoming strong opposition and occupying important positions in the triangle formed by the two branches of the canal and the road from La Fère to St. Quentin. They also advanced north of the Oise, taking the Liez fort and capturing Etreviller and Roupy.

Though these were operations of detail, they tightened the lines around both St. Quentin and La Fère, greatly facilitating future operations against both towns.

General Humbert's forces now command the entire region west of the river and the canal from La Fère north beyond a single-track railroad that crosses the river at Mezières. They command all of the approaches to St. Quentin from the north, west, and south, and are within less than five miles of the town.

The occupation of Fort Liez gives the French command not only of the entire country around La Fère, but of the valley of the Oise to a considerable distance northward, the valley of the Serre eastward and the railroad line leading to the Laon citadel, which is visible from the height.

General Mangin's army south of the Oise took Servais, closing in on La Fère from the south, while they improved their position north of Laffaux.

Both the Third and Tenth French armies are now practically on the line where the pursuit of the Germans stopped in the Spring of 1917. German prisoners say that orders recently issued are to fight to the last man to hold the present positions. There are indications, however, that the Germans have less confidence than last year in the inviolability of this line. They made great sacrifices to hold other positions in front of it without avail, and the burning of La Fère betrays the fear that the line is not entirely safe there.

The Hindenburg line comprises a wide system of defenses having a total depth in some places of nearly ten miles, and the fall of its pillars does not mean a breach in the position. The St. Gobain Forest, supposed to be the strongest part of the line, is now tightly pressed from the north by the occupation of Servais, and from the west by the capture of Barisis, while the French in front of Fresnes are crowding it from the south end.

FOE HAS ONLY 195 DIVISIONS.

All but 16 of These Have Been Engaged Heavily This Year.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 10.—New evidence of the shortage of man power in the German Army has reached Washington from an authoritative source, it was learned today, showing that seven enemy divisions on the western front had been disbanded entirely for lack of men.

There are now only 195 German divisions on the entire front, according to these reports, and of these there are only sixteen that have not been engaged in heavy fighting of the present year. In at fewest eight divisions the battalion formation has been reduced to three companies from four, which means a reduction of one-fourth in the fighting strength of these divisions. The report adds that the trench strength of the German army is now entirely inadequate.

These reports throw light upon the underlying reasons for the great German withdrawal and complete abandonment of the drive which was started last March. It was vitally necessary that the enemy shorten his lines to conserve his troops. By withdrawal to the Hindenburg line he has reduced the length of his front between Ypres and Rheims by about sixty miles.

It is not yet clear whether the German high command considers the Hindenburg line short enough to be held with the present German forces. The general trend of that old defensive front forms a great curve from Verdun to the North Sea, bulging outward in the center to take in Lille, Douai, Cambrai, St. Quentin, Laon and other towns now menaced by the Allied advance. A further retirement to the region of the Belgian border, it is obvious, would cut more miles from the length of the front to be held, but there are many indications that the first stand, at least, is to be on the old front.

FOE EFFORT SPENT, HAIG TELLS ARMY

Believes Dark Days Through Which British Have Passed Will Never Return.

CONTRAST TO SPRING ORDER

New Address to Troops Considered in London to Mark Bright War Period.

LONDON, Sept. 10.—The capture by the British of 75,000 prisoners and 750 guns in four weeks is announced by Field Marshal Haig in an order of the day.

"We have passed through many dark days. Please God, these never will return," says the Field Marshal, who adds: "The enemy has now spent his effort."

The text of the order of the day reads:

"One month has now passed since the British armies, having successfully withstood all the attacks of the enemy, once more took the offensive in their turn. In that short space of time by a series of brilliant and skilfully executed actions we have repeatedly defeated the same German armies whose vastly superior numbers compelled our retreat last Spring. What has happened on the British front has happened also on the front of our allies.

"Less than six months after the launching of the great German offensive, which was to have cut the allied front in two, the Allied armies everywhere today are advancing victoriously side by side over the same battlefield on which, by the courage and steadfastness of their defense, they broke the enemy's assaults.

"Yet more has been done. Already we have pressed beyond our old battle lines of 1917 and have made a wide breach in the enemy's strongest defenses.

"In this glorious accomplishment all ranks, arms and services of the British armies in France have borne their part in the most worthy and honorable manner.

"The capture of 75,000 prisoners and 750 guns in the course of four weeks' fighting speaks for the magnitude of your efforts and the magnificence of your achievement.

"My thanks are due to all ranks of the fighting forces for their indomitable spirit in defense and their boldness in attack, to all commanders and their staff officers under whose able direction such great results have been attained and also to all those whose unsparing labors behind the actual fighting line have contributed essentially to the common cause. To have commanded this splendid army which, at a time of grave crisis has so nobly done its duty fills me with pride.

"We have passed through many dark days together. Please God, these never will return. The enemy has now spent his effort and we rely confidently upon each one of you to turn to full advantage the opportunity your skill, courage and resolution have created."

This order of Field Marshal Haig set beside his famous "back to the wall" order of six months ago, pointedly marks the end of one of the most critical periods in British history. That the country has triumphantly issued from that dark period is ungrudgingly and gratefully attributed to the timely assistance given by the American nation, not only in the field of arms but also in the economic field.

It is universally felt that Field Marshal Haig's order marks the beginning of a new period in the world struggle in which the nation is able to look forward with hope and confidence. There is growing evidence that the enemy now will withdraw to the Hindenburg line and try to make his stand there and begin a new phase of his defensive warfare.

The British public is now speculating with confidence on where and how Marshal Foch will strike his next blow, and it is firmly believed that it will not be long before the great American forces will be found taking a more prominent part in the operations. In the meantimes, all dispatches from Germany and Austria bring evidences of a new and rapid growth of the peace offensive movement and the tottering of the enemy's home front.

PREPARES GERMANS FOR FURTHER LOSS

Article on the Great Battle by Vorwaerts Critic Circulated in Germany by Wolff Bureau.

SCOFF AT HINTZE'S SPEECH

Frankfurter Zeitung Calls His Statements About the British Press "Arrant Nonsense."

By GEORGE RENWICK.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

AMSTERDAM, Sept. 10.—Richard Gaedke, the military critic, has another interesting article in the Vorwärts of yesterday on the military situation. He warns the people that the struggle on the west front will certainly have far-reaching consequences and that there is every possibility that the enemy's offensive will not decrease, but be extended in its scope. One of the most important goals of the Allies is again the Flanders coast, he thinks, and he points to the great resources which are at the disposal of the British Army alone in men, tanks, machine guns, heavy artillery, airplanes, and all necessary war material. Turning to recent events, he says:

"Of course, we have not given up voluntarily all the positions we once held. In a battle extending over weeks, one position after another was lost. We accepted the consequences of that, and voluntarily withdrew our line as the enemy threatened to break or outflank it. We have therefore been fighting a rearguard struggle on a great scale. We are now returning toward the Hindenburg line generally. At points we have reached it and even in some places left it behind us. Whether this will be the end of our retreat, we don't know. Still the retreat must come to an end some time, and the decisive struggle will begin."

The Frankfurter Zeitung says that the last four weeks have produced the greatest events of the whole war, and adds:

"The most important success of the enemy and one we must take seriously is that it has been possible to carry on this offensive with such great and ever-increasing strength for a month and a half without pause." The journal, too, warns the people that very severe fighting is yet to come.

In connection with the frank statements made by Gaedke in the Vorwärts articles, it is interesting to note that they are circulated by the Wolff Bureau. That is a clear indication that they are officially inspired.

The Frankfurter Zeitung, criticising Foreign Secretary von Hintze's speech to the Austro-Hungarian newspaper men in Vienna, ridicules his statement that the English press is entirely under the thumb of the authorities, and tells him he is talking arrant nonsense when he declares that in the Entente countries "journalists who do not represent the Government views simply go to prison."

Equally false, it declares, is his statement that the German and Austrian press retains its freedom, even in war time. That freedom of which von Hintze speaks, the journel concludes, simply does not exist, and all efforts to abolish the military censorship in political matters have failed.

BOOSTING GERMAN LOAN.

ZURICH, Sept. 10.—The German press is beginning a noisy puffing of the ninth war loan. The Stuttgart Tageblatt compares the loan to the Ninth Symphony of Beethoven, pretending that it will mark the re-birth of the working power of the German people, and asserting that the only way to counter-attack defeatism and the discouragement of the masses of the people is to take up the loan.

The Munich Augsburger Abendzeitung says the success of the loan will be proof that Germany believes still in military success.

Some papers attempt also the method of describing the war loan as bringing peace nearer. It is significant that the Socialist journals have not yet whispered a word about the loan.

CHURCH ROW IN GERMANY.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ZURICH, Sept. 10.—The Socialist and Progressive press energetically protest against the reactionary policy of the high prelates, especially the Cardinal Archbishop of Cologne, Mgr. Hartmann, who is developing feverish activity for war aims of the Pan Germans and against universal suffrage. The protests are published in the Socialist papers.

Dr. Mueller, a Catholic priest, who favors the idea of universal suffrage, demands that the Cardinal shall stop interfering in politics, otherwise the Church and Cardinal will lose popular esteem.

Official Reports of the Day's Operations

British

LONDON, Sept. 10.

Night Report—Except for local fighting in the Epehy and Gouzeaucourt sectors, in which we secured prisoners, there is nothing of special interest to report from the battlefront south of the Scarpe.

On the Lys front our patrols made slight progress northeast of Neuve Chapelle and west of Armentières.

Stormy weather continues.

Day Report—Yesterday evening the enemy launched a second counterattack against the positions gained by us during the morning west of Gouzeaucourt. He was completely repulsed. Our line has been advanced during the night south of Havrincourt.

Progress was made by us northeast of Neuve Chapelle and west and north of Armentières.

French

PARIS, Sept. 10.

Night Report—Further progress has been made by us between the Somme and the Oise, despite strong enemy resistance. We have passed Hinacourt and repulsed a counter-attack from Essigny.

North of the Aisne we repulsed several counterattacks in the Laffaux region.

Day Report—To the east of the Crozat Canal French troops have captured Gibercourt and have made progress in the direction of Hinacourt and Essigny-le-Grand.

South of the Ailette River we repulsed two enemy counterattacks in the region of Nanteuil-la-Fosse.

Enemy raids in the Argonne and in the Vosges were checked and the raiders driven back.

Monday Night Report, (Delayed)—New progress was realized today by our troops at various points on the battlefront. North of the Somme we captured the villages of Etreillers and Roupy. Beyond the Crozat Canal we have taken Serancourt-le-Grand, Clastres, Montescourt, Lizerolles, and Remigny. Our advance elements occupied Hill 103, south of Contescourt Station, Essigny-le-Grand, and Hill 117.

North of the Oise we took the fort of Liez, the wood northwest of the Canlers Farm, and the Rouge Farm.

South of the Oise we have taken Briquettay and the Servais Station. Elsewhere we improved our positions north of Laffaux, and also between the Aisne and the Vesle, in the region of Glennes.

Belgian

HAVRE, Sept. 10, (via London.

Sunday and Sunday Night Reports—Our troops enlarged on their successes obtained on Aug. 28 on both sides of the Steenstraete-Dixmude road on a front of about 2,000 meters, and penetrated the first enemy lines to a depth of one kilometer, which we maintained.

To the southwest of St. Julien our detachments penetrated by a surprise attack into the first position of the enemy on a front of 3,500 meters to an average depth of from 500 to 600 meters, which were consolidated.

These new successes bring into our hands very advantageous positions.

German

BERLIN, Sept. 10, (via London.)

Night Report—Renewed British attacks south of the Péronne-Cambrai road and French partial attacks on both sides of the Ham-St. Quentin road have been repulsed. There have been local engagements on the Ailette.

Day Report—During partial attacks made by the enemy north of Mercken and northeast of Ypres minor trench sections remained in his hands.

On both sides of the Péronne-Cambrai road the English continued their attack. The main thrust was directed against Gouzeaucourt and Epehy. The enemy was repulsed.

Fresh enemy attacks delivered in the evening from Havrincourt Wood and south of the Péronne-Cambrai road also failed.

There was partial fighting in Holnon Wood and on the Ham-St. Quentin road.

Our advanced troops which were withdrawn Sunday night from the Crozat Canal were in touch yesterday with weak enemy reconnoitring detachments west of the Essigny-Vendeuil line.

There were partial fights south of the River Oise.

North of the Ailette River there was artillery activity.

Between the Ailette and the Aisne the artillery fighting increased toward the afternoon to great strength. Violent and repeated enemy attacks, lasting until evening, broke down. Brandenburg Grenadiers especially distinguished themselves in defense.

Between the Aisne and the Vesle Rivers we repulsed French advances. There were successful enterprises of our own to the east of Rheims, to the south of Parroy, and on the Doller.

SHAKE-UP EXPECTED IN GERMAN CABINET

Hertling Likely to Go and Dr. Solf to Become the "Fighting Chancellor."

POST FOR SCHEIDEMANN?

Report that Socialist and Also Erzberger, the Catholic Leader, Will Be Called In.

By GEORGE RENWICK.

Copyright, 1918, by The New York Times Company.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

AMSTERDAM, Sept. 10.—I have on several occasions lately referred to the likelihood of considerable and noteworthy changes in the German Government. The belief that something is going to happen is further reinforced by a statement in the Leipziger Tageblatt. That journal's Vienna correspondent states that the recent discussions between Herr von Hintze and the Austro-Hungarian Government were confined almost entirely to the present and future political changes in the Vienna situation. He states further that "important information is imminent in high places in Germany and in Austria-Hungary as well."

As for Germany, he declares that Count von Hertling will retire and that the new Chancellor will be Dr. Solf, the present Colonial Minister. It is reported in diplomatic circles, the Vienna correspondent adds, that Herr Erzberger and Herr Scheidemann will become members of the Government as representatives of their parties, the Catholic Centre and the Majority Socialist Parties, respectively.

The Vossische Zeitung, commenting on this news, says that, though nothing is yet settled, "changes in the Government may be regarded as certain." It refers incidentally to the burden of the Chancellor's duties, which he naturally feels all the more on account of his advanced years. The journal adds that such changes as those referred to in the Leipsiger Tageblatt have been much discussed in Berlin political circles of late and that a joint committee of the Reichstag majority parties will meet toward the end of this week in order to discuss the general situation. The Main Committee of the Reichstag comes together in the beginning of October, and the Vossische Zeitung thinks that before that time decisions will have been come to and the position made clear.

I may add, as another sign of a change, that Herr Ebert, the leading Socialist Deputy, has been discussing matters with the Chancellor in Berlin. Reichstag circles attribute considerable importance to this fact.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Sept. 11.—A dispatch from Amsterdam to the Daily Express says:

"Sensational rumors of impending Government crises in Germany always go two and two, with military failures, so that it is not surprising to find the German press full of reports about Hertling's early withdrawal and his probable replacement by Dr. Solf. It is already arranged that Hertling will be ill and must therefore rest, as he is too weak to withstand the stormy session expected in the Reichstag in the coming Autumn. Dr. Solf, who already is styled, probably by himself, the fighting Chancellor, would, according to the papers, be the man Germany needs—a sort of a civilian Hindenburg.

Just as before Hertling's appointment papers had much to say about the parliamentarization of the Government personnel, so now Erzberger and Scheidemann are already mentioned as leading members of Dr. Solf's cabinet, but it is quite clear that if this happened it would mean an end of Pan German influence at both Berlin and headquarters.

It must be remembered that the German Government may have an interest in these reports being printed in allied countries where it is hoped in Berlin they will be considered as a sign that Germany is reforming and may thus pave the way to peace negotiations, but everybody in Germany knows the Kaiser will only appoint Erzberger and Scheidemann as ministers on the day when he cannot do otherwise. That day has not come yet. Meanwhile the likelihood of the Chancellorship of Solf increases. It is probable Hertling will use as a pretext the Prussian House of Lords' refusal to pass the franchise bill in order to end his career honorably and leave the whole muddle of war and peace problems to his successor.

BERNHARD ASSAILS ROOSEVELT WAR AIMS

Asserts That Allies' Real Object Is the Economic Paralysis of Germany.

Copyright, 1918, by The New York Times Company.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

THE HAGUE, Sept. 10.—Georg Bernhard writes that the domestic fight in Germany against the Pan Germans is not a clever move at present, as even if they have done Germany the greatest harm in the world it is impossible to punish them now, especially as all the Entente propaganda speeches are directed primarily against Germany's domestic split.

"We do not wish to insinuate," Bernhard continues, "that patriots like Delbrück intend to favor this propaganda, but the result is that every stupid Pan German expression formerly has been brought to daylight, although leading Entente statesmen are much too clever to imagine that we intend to cling to these war aims in the present situation of Germany.

The best proof of the bad effect of this Pan German fight, the writer says, is Roosevelt's late declaration. He goes on:

"Roosevelt demands as American war aims not only the separation of Alsace and Lorraine, but also the giving up of Schleswig-Holstein and the handing over of German Poland and West Prussia to Poland. He wants to divide up Turkey and Austria-Hungary. We have never read in the American papers, after similar utterances, that these demands hinder peace.

"The wildest annexationist plans in Germany appear harmless comparatively, and Roosevelt makes very similar demands to those appearing recently in the French press. It is shown ever more clearly that the real aim is the economic paralysis of Germany through political division.

"Roosevelt, who has always had a loose tongue, expresses what the others think and even if every word is not taken literally the spirit which speaks in his words is significant. His speech shows that we have more important things to do than internal political fights."

Bernard concludes that if the Germans really wish to believe in the enemy's statements, then Cecil carries more weight than Roosevelt at this critical period.

AERIAL SQUADRONS FILMED.

Two Exhibitions of Flying Feats Over City Given for Camera Men.

For the purpose of obtaining motion pictures of American airplanes to be exhibited in theatres throughout the country, a squadron of seven Curtiss airplanes flew from Mitchel Field, Garden City, L. I., to Manhattan yesterday afternoon, in charge of Lieutenant J. Orb. The airplanes circled the Statue of Liberty at an altitude of 2,500 feet and passed over the Woolworth Building. A motion picture operator in another machine took a picture of the squadron. The machines left Mitchel Field at 4 o'clock and returned an hour and a half later.

Yesterday morning six airplanes indulged in stunt flying for the camera man. They used the Curtiss machine. The squadron was in charge of Lieutenant Redfield. They reached an altitude of 1,500 feet and gave exhibitions that include the Immerman turns, leaf roll and nosedip.

as integral parts of the trench lines and as isolated centres of resistance in open ground behind the fields of barbed wire. Speaking generally, these small cement forts, as they really are, are placed along hedges and roads and in and among farm buildings where they are not easy to pick out in airplane photographs. Some of them are large enough to hold a hundred men, but the majority are intended for garrisons of eight or nine men each under a non-commissioned officer.

The reinforced concrete roofs of these fortlets have an average thickness of about four feet, although sometimes running to five feet, and are declared to be sufficiently strong to resist repeated direct hits from even eight and ten-inch guns. Some of them are so strong that they have been known to remain intact when actually dislodged from their foundations by heavy gunfire.

Opinion here is satisfied that Foch will make no wild attempt after the German manner to reduce the Hindenburg Line by direct frontal attack. Such a method would be directly contrary to his precepts, as exemplified by all his recent tactics. As has been more than once pointed out recently there are several ways of reducing fortresses and the only really bad one is that which the Crown Prince employed before Verdun.

Paris once more today is on the tiptoe of expectation awaiting Foch's next move. Close attention still is foeused on the operations of Mangin around the Forest of St. Gobain, but the eyes of most of those who most fully appreciate Foch's elastic, adaptable, and finely articulated methods are much more inclined to look northward beyond Arras and westward beyond Rheims and even beyond Verdun.

GERMAN WAR DEAL WITH BOLSHEVIKI

Washington Accepts View That New Treaty Is an Offensive Alliance.

CZECHS STILL IN SAMARA

Message from Consul Harris at Irkutsk Refutes Reports of Enemy Success on the Volga.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 10.—What is regarded as closely approximating an offensive and defensive alliance between Germany and the Bolshevist Government in Russia is involved in the treaty just negotiated between them, the first official information concerning which reached the State Department today in a dispatch from American Ambassador Francis at Archangel.

The Ambassador confirmed recent news that the new treaty supplementary to that of Brest-Litovsk provides that if the Bolshevist Government orders an offensive and fights against the Entente allied forces in Northern Russia, Germany will guarantee Russia against attack either by or through Finland. The treaty also stipulates that after the expulsion of the allied forces from Russia, Germany will guarantee the security of the coasting and fishing fleets of Russia in Russian waters.

So far as can be ascertained from official sources all that Russia obtains in return for the 6,000,000,000 marks she has agreed to pay to Germany and for undertaking an offensive against the Entente forces stretched southward along the railway from Archangel toward Vologda, is a guarantee of protection against attack by, or through, Finland, and a contingent guarantee of protection to the Russian coastal and fishing fleets.

These details of the treaty were also regarded as tending to confirm a report which reached Washington last week that the Berlin Government had asked the Bolshevist Government for the right of passage for German troops across Russian territory for use against the Czechoslovak forces at Samara and other points in European Russia.

State of War With Allies.

Officials declined to intimate whether the new treaty recognized, from the German and Bolshevist viewpoints, the existence of a state of war between the Lenine and Trotzky régime and the allied powers. It was, however, pointed out in one well informed quarter, that war, in its strict sense, could only exist between recognized States, and that whatever the intentions of those in control of the Bolshevist Government, the United States and other allied powers not having recognized it, the attitudes of the Entente Governments might not be regarded as constituting a state of war at this time, despite the fact that officials of the Bolshevist Government at Moscow some time ago served notice on the Entente diplomatic representatives there that a state of war or, as they subsequently phrased it, of defense, existed.

For some time it has been believed that the Bolsheviki, having isolated themselves through a serieo sf barbarous acts, would turn to Germany for support of their tottering power, and the new treaty is regarded in some diplomatic quarters as the price they must pay for help from the German Government. However, in view of the present demands for man power on the western front, it is not thought that Germany will be able to make any real contribution of troops to aid the Bolsheviki.

State Department officials were very much gratified today over receipt of definite information that Samara, on the Volga front, is still in possession of the Czechosiovak forces. The dispatch came from Consul Harris at Irkutsk, and stated that there was uninterrupted communication again between Irkutsk, Ekaterinburg and Samara, "on the eastern front, which the Czechoslovaks are holding against Bolshevist attacks."

The Russian Embassy today received a cablegram from Omsk, in Western Siberia, this being the first direct message from that city, which is the seat of the Provisional Government of Siberia, since the fall of the Kerensky Government.

The greatest importance is attached in official and in Russian circles to the restoration of communication with Western Siberia. It is regarded as meaning that the centre of political and military interest in Siberia will shift from the direction of Vladivostok and Harbin toward Central and Western Siberia beyond Lake Baikal. The success of the Czechoslovaks and the freeing of Siberia from Bolshevist domination have accomplished results greater than were expected even recently.

There has been considerable speculation over the failure to "dispatch the American economic commission to Russia. At the State Department today it was explained that there had been no abandonment of the plans regarding this expedition, but that the military situation previously existing had not been such as to warrant the dispatch of such a commission.

Message from Tschaikovsky.

The Russian Embassy today issued this statement:

"The Russian Embassy, having entered into contact with various national organizations newly arisen in Russia, has received, among other direct information, the following statement, signed by Nicholas Tschaikovsky, President of the Government of Northern Russia:

"Archangel, Aug. 31.—In the region of Northern Russia, the yoke of the Bolshevikl is thrown off. In accord with the Allies, the Government of the region of Northern Russia, not recognizing the peace treaty of Brest, has set as its aim the expulsion of the Germans out of the boundaries of Russia and the creation anew of a great and indivisible Russia.

"Owing to the initiative of the League of Regeneration of Russia, composed of representatives of all political parties, except the extreme ones, the Government of the Region of Northern Russia was formed by delegates of the Northern Provinces to the Constituent Assembly and by representatives of the Zemstvos and towns of the region.

"The municipalities and judicial bodies are reconstituted. The Russian army is again created and on the basis of discipline. The Allies are aiding us. Mobilization has been declared in the Northern Region.

"Desiring to secure real liberty and a democratic régime, the Government of Northern Russia, joining hands with other regional Governments, has as final aim the formation of a single Government for the whole of Russia based on universal suffrage.

"The Government of Northern Russia appeals to all Russian citizens to rally around the banner of salvation of their native country, of the liberties gained, and the rebirth of Russia.

"NICHOLAS TSCHAIKOVSKY,
"President of the Government of Northern Russia."

RED PRESS BLOODTHIRSTY.

Extermination of Bourgeoisie and Social Revolutionaries Preached.

Copyright, 1918, by The New York Times Company.
Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

STOCKHOLM, Sept. 10.—The latest Bolshevist papers to reach here are filled with sanguinary articles, appeals and resolutions, demanding a 'mass terror" against the Bourgeoisie in consequence of the attempts on Lenine and Uritzky, which were committed by the Socialists. The general watchword is individual terrorism.

The Commune of the North [Petrograd] has decided to begin the extermination of the Bourgeoisie and its conscious agents.

Krasnay's Gazeta publishes a dispatch from the front, at Smovieff, demanding pitiless vengeance and death to the Social Revolutionaries.

"Laws and tribunals of justice are not necessary in order that their blood may flow, that they may be exterminated," concludes the dispatch.

The next day after the outrages the Petrograd Soviet passed a resolution increasing the wages of the Soviet Guard to 500 rubles a month, in addition to their food. It is especially characteristic that during the last few days no section of the population, even the working class, has received any bread. Workers only received small rations of meat.

STOCKHOLM, Sept. 9, (Associated Press.)—Dispatches received from Russia announcing that the neutral Ministers have protested against the wholesale shooting of political prisoners and threatening to expel the Bolsheviki from neutral countries if the political executions continue, caused no surprise to travelers recently returned from Russia, who were in Moscow and Petrograd when the wild taking of hostages began.

Ten thousand officers of the old army who were ordered to register in Moscow were held prisoner for nearly a week, almost without food. Cholera broke out among them, because of the crowded and insanitary conditions of their quarters.

Leon Trotzky, the Bolshevist Secretary of War, wired General Alexeieff, Commander in Chief of the Anti-Bolshevist forces, that an officer would be shot for every Bolshevik killed by the Czechs or white Guard. Alexeieff is reported to have replied that if officers were shot he would not stop reprisals until every Jew in Russia was quartered. Finally a majority of the officers, half of them from Moscow, were released, but hundreds of officers are missing and are reported to have been shot. Many thousands of officers of Moscow refused to answer the call to register and made their escape to the various Anti-Bolshevist fronts.

In Petrograd the officers summoned for registration were generally taken to Kronstadt, where thousands are still held prisoner.

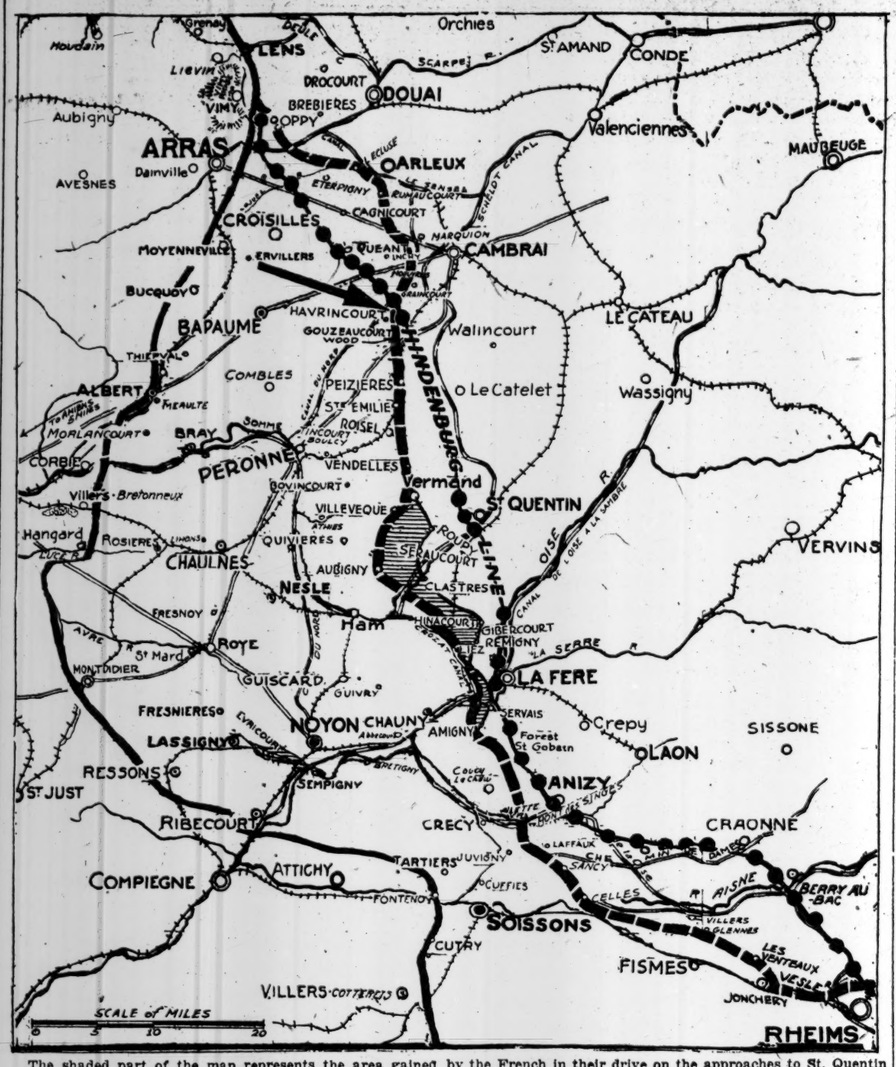
Captain Cromie, the British Naval Attaché, who was killed by the Bolsheviki, who mutilated his body and let it hang out of the embassy window until the neutral diplomats threatened to leave Petrograd if it was not removed, was friendly to the Bolsheviki and belonged to the group of British officials who urged recognition of the Soviet Republic and co-operation with it until Trotzky broke faith about permitting the Czechs to leave Russia by way of Siberia.

EX-MINISTERS EXECUTED.

Reds at Moscow Put 29 Famous Anti-Revolutionists to Death.

PARIS, Sept. 10.—The Bolshevist propaganda service announces that twenty-nine famous anti-revolutionists have been executed at Moscow, among them Alexei Khvostoff, Minister of the Interior under Emperor Nicholas; J. G. Chicheglovitoff, former Minister of Justice; B. Bielestof, former Director of the Police Department, and M. Ganko, former Under Chief of Police of Moscow, and also a priest named Vostragor.

Gains by the Allies Close to the Hindenburg Line



The shaded part of the map represents the area gained by the French in their drive on the approaches to St. Quentin and La Fere.

The War Situation

BY THE MILITARY EXPERT OF THE NEW YORK TIMES.

The French continue to make progress toward St. Quentin, although the way is becoming tortuous. The battle is becoming more and more like the first battle of the Somme, a struggle here and there for individual limited objectives. This has come about entirely through the increased German resistance. As was to be expected, this resistance increased as the distance to the prepared positions decreased. The principal difference between the fighting now and that in 1916 is the persistent nature of the attacks. Then between each attack there was an interval of several days, which allowed for the artillery preparation which characterized the offensive tactics of that time. These tactics, however, have become out of date, so that the interval between attacks is no longer necessary. In the drive for limited objective the French are making use almost entirely of the pincers process. They drive hard on either side of the objective, and when the pocket has been formed pull the string which closes it.

Yesterday we saw the capture of Clastres by this method; today Remigny, and possibly Ly-Fontaine, to the northeast of it, are almost certain to be in French hands. The result is that the French are daily creeping nearer the old battle lines and are certain eventually to find themselves along the Oise Canal, where they were at the end of 1917. In a general way, therefore, we are witnessing the encirclement of St. Quentin. This does not mean that the town is in any immediate danger of capture. Driven further back, possibly, than they had anticipated when they began the 1917 retreat, the Germans found themselves at St. Quentin practically surrounded. The French lines ran east of and parallel to the La Fère-St. Quentin road, and then circumscribed an almost perfect semicircle about the city, not more than a mile and a half from its outskirts. They were, however, unable to complete the journey, and the German lines held. This situation prevailed until the beginning of this year, when the Germans themselves moved out. The value of St. Quentin, therefore, was at that period largely destroyed.

The same, or a very similar, situation is growing up now. The French are again pressing up close to the city—in fact, they are not more than four and a half miles from it at the nearest point. But St. Quentin has no rail connection with La Fère, or with any of the northern bases. To the northeast is Le Cateau, where the railroad is found connecting the two towns, but there is none anywhere else. St. Quentin is therefore not one of the great chain of bases upon which the retention of the German position depends. Its value lies principally in the fact that by its capture the Allies would obtain control of the eastern bank of the upper Somme River, which would open the way to a still further advance to the banks of the Oise. For this reason it seemed advisable for the Germans to hold it. This situation having been duplicated in 1917, there is nothing that would indicate that there is any necessity for the evacuation of the city.

In the north the British are meeting with the same general experience as the French in the south; they are being checked and held up. The reasons are somewhat different, however. They are much further from the Hindenburg line than are the French in the south, and the Germans do not seem inclined to fall back unless forced to do so. The reason is that because of the advance of the Canadians over the Drocourt-Quéant Switch, the northern leg of this celebrated position is seriously threatened. If the Germans fall back to this line completely, a deep pocket will remain in the line west of Cambrai, with the Canadians on one side and the English on the other. It will be practically impossible to prevent this pocket from being closed, in which event the British line will be drawn up within not more than two miles of Cambrai. This will bring the eastern approaches to the city under close artillery fire and make its continued use as a base an embarrassing proposition. Therefore, we see the Germans standing fast on the eastern bank of the upper Canal du Nord and piling their strength into this position to defend it.

The real test of the allied strength would naturally come when this former line is reached, as it must be in the south within a few days. What Foch will do then no one can say, although there are several possibilities which hold considerable promise. Almost certain it is, however, that the one thing he will not do will be to try to break this line by direct frontal attack.

FRENCH DEPUTY KILLED AND ANOTHER WOUNDED

Gaston Dumesnil and Abel Ferry Hit by Same Shell—Dumesnil Dies After Being Decorated.

Copyright, 1918, by The New York Times Company.
Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Sept. 10.—Premier Clemenceau's flying visit to the front on Saturday and Sunday was of an even more strenuous character than most of his frequent trips to the war zone. Saturday morning the grand old Frenchman, who embodies the very heart and soul of his country in its magnificient effort against the common foe, accompanied King Albert on a visit to several of the most interesting points of the Belgian front.

After lunching, the King and Queen had a long chat with him. The French Premier and War Minister drove into the British zone and inspected the devasted regions round Kemmel, Bailleul, and Neuve Eglise which have just been liberated. From an observatory post in the advanced lines M. Clemenceau watched the operations in course against Armentières, which he saw burning in front of him, and was able to catch distant glimpses of the great city of Lille. Yesterday Premier Clemenceau went on to Noyon and spent the whole day in its neighborhood, visiting Chauny, Coley le Château, Soissons and other centres, returning to Paris shortly before midnight.

As a result of the Premier's tour along the front, Paris learned this afternoon that Gaston Dumesnil, a well-known member of the Chamber of Deputies, had died of wounds and that Abel Ferry, another member, lay wounded in a front line hospital. Dumesnil, was elected for Angers by a majority of over 13,000 in the last election, and Ferry is one of the members of the Army Committee of the Chamber. Dumesnil whose class had been mobilized since the beginning of the war, had fought bravely throughout. He was several times mentioned in orders and was wounded in 1916, on which occasion he received the decoration of the Legion of Honor. He was constant in his attention to parliamentary duties, but always returned to the front when the House rose. Dumesnil was seriously wounded while at the head of a section of infantry which he commanded as a Lieutenant.

Ferry's wound was received while he was fulfilling an official Parliamentary mission at the front. M. Clemenceau visited the hospital, arriving before Dumesnil died. The Premier handed him the insigna notifying him of his promotion to an officer of the Legion of Honor, and he nominated Ferry a Chevalier of the same order. Ferry, who is a nephew of the late Jules Ferry, to whose active Colonial policy France largely owes her indo-Chinese and other possessions, was Under Secretary for Foreign Affairs in the Viviani Cabinet in 1914.

WITH THE FRENCH ARMY IN FRANCE, Sept. 10, (Associated Press.)—Gaston Dumesnil, Member of the French Chamber of Deputies, died early today in a hospital near the front. Shortly before his death Deputy Dumesnil was decorated with the Cross of the Legion of Honor by Premier Clemenceau. Deputy Abel Ferry, who was wounded at the same time, was made a Chevalier of the Legion of Honor by the Premier.

On Sunday Deputy Dumesnil, who was a Lieutenant of Infantry, accompanied by Deputy Ferry and a French Captain, went to the first lines, where a shell burst near them, killing the Captain and wounding the others.

Deputy Dumesnil was 40 years old. He had been wounded twice and was cited in orders six times. He is the thirteenth Deputy to be killed at the front.

ROYAL ENGAGEMENT ANGERS LUXEMBURG

Parliament May Ask Grand Duchess to Prevent Sister's Marriage to Rupprecht.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Sept. 10.—A dispatch to The Daily Express from Amsterdam says the announcement of the engagement of the sister of the Grand Duchess of Luxemburg to Crown Prince Rupprecht of Bavaria has caused the deepest ill-feeling throughout the country, where the Germans are cordially hated. Political circles are also incensed at the reply received to their representations from a leading court official who described the matter as purely private and as having nothing to do with politics.

This answer caused the Parliamentary Opposition to announce an interpellation on Germany's continual breaches of Luxemburg neutrality, and the Government were so afraid to accept the discussion that they resigned when by 26 votes to 24 the Chamber declared in favor of the interpellation.

Luxemburg people say that the Grand Duchess ought to have forbidden the marriage of her sister Antonia with a man who is known as "Luxemburg's Hangman," for it amounts to selling the country to Germany at the moment when it is helpless under military occupation. It is believed the Luxemburg Parliament will appeal to the Grand Duchess to take the necessary steps to render the marriage impossible.

TURKISH TROOPS THREATEN BULGARIA

Large Force Reported on Border, Where Trouble Is Brewing Over Conquered Territory.

BERLIN GREATLY WORRIED

Neither of Central Powers' Allies Is Satisfied with Germany's Division of the Spoils.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 10.—Information reached here today from a source usually reliable that Turkey has sent a large force to the border of Bulgaria, where trouble is brewing over division of territorial spoils of war between these two allies of Germany and Austria-Hungary. The possibility of open conflict between Turkey and Bulgaria is watched here with great interest, and is known to be causing serious misgivings at Berlin.

The revolutionary spirit is rife in the Bulgarian Army and among the civilian population, according to reports. The Bulgarians want more territory, and are said to be determined to secure all of Serbia and even a portion of Austria. They already have secured a strip off Northern Turkey, including one-half of the City of Adrianople.

Another cause for dissension is the fact that when the Dobrudja was awarded to Bulgaria in the Rumanian peace treaty dictated by Germany, Turkey demanded the cession of that portion of its northern territory that had previously been given to Bulgaria as a reward for entering the war on the side of the Central Powers.

The recent resignation of Premier Radoslavoff of Bulgaria is said to have been caused by his inability to obtain more territory and his unwillingness to betray the Central Powers. The new Premier, Malinoff, is believed here to be a figurehead who will accept the dictation of Germany, but the army and the populace are not satisfied with the situation.

GERMANS FEAR FOR DOUAI.

Drive from Apex of British Wedge Would Threaten City.

PARIS, Sept. 10.—Some of the German newspaper correspondents show anxiety over the situation caused by the British advance along the Scarpe, in the Arras region. The correspondent of the Frankfurter Zeitung, for instance, points out that a drive by the British from the apex of the wedge they have pushed into the line in that region would lead to the gates of Douai. The correspondent expresses the hope that artificial floods will be put in the way of the British to help stop the tanks.

Additional advices that fires are burning in Douai have been received.

There are three German lines of defense behind the Hindenburg line, the first closely paralleling it and the others providing for retreats along wide fronts, according to an outline of the German defense system printed by the Matin today.

The first line in the rear of the Hindenburg position, according to the newspaper, starts from the south of Lille and parallels the Hindenburg line at an average distance of from three to six miles. The second comprises a line running from Lille to Metz, the intermediary points on which the newspaper does not indicate. This line would be about 180 miles in length.

Finally, the newspaper adds, there is a fourth retreat line, on which the Germans are now vigorously working. It runs from Valenciennes, twenty miles west of Douai, in a southeasterly direction to Givert, on the Meuse, at the Belgian border. The front thus indicated extends for about sixty miles.

AID FOR ITALIAN FRONT.

Rome Sees Significance in Crowell's Estimate of Our Strength.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ROME, Sept. 10.—The Tribuna, in a leading article summing up the importance and value of what it deems the almost incredible contribution to the war on the part of America in the present and in the near future, says:

"Many American soldiers now in France are marking time, being kept in reserve by Foch, while others are not yet fully trained. When we consider what has been achieved by the small number of divisions already in the line, the moral and material weight they have contributed to the operations, we may realize what the American Army is destined to become—an army by January, maybe, of 2,500,000 men, all of whom, in geometric progression, are to be utilized in the struggle. Those numbers, however, are hardly less significant than the statement of Acting Secretary of War Crowell that the American production of arms and munitions is so great that of itself it will swamp the German output.

"With such a magnificent wealth of production, we may well believe that the American military contribution will offer a large margin for distribution, not only on the French but also on the Italian front, since the forces now in Italy are announced as the 'first contingent.' The American forces will not only be distributed with justice on the common front, but also will be of intrinsic advantage for the great and rapid effect their use will have, both morally and materially. This is indeed a wise and far-seeing economy of the forces of the Entente."

FEAR OUR NEGRO SOLDIERS.

Germans Hear That They Cut Off Their Prisoners' Ears.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, Sept. 9, (Associated Press.)—The enemy heavily shelled towns in the Woevre sector behind our lines this morning. One of his patrols attacked the American outposts, but was easily driven off.

There was considerable patrol activity in the Vosges district last night. One encounter took place, the enemy retiring with one wounded man. Negro troops have occupied one Vosges village in which French civilians were held prisoner.

The Frenchmen on coming through to the American lines declared that the Germans were considerably excited at finding themselves opposed by negroes, of whom they are said to be afraid, because of reports that the American negroes cut off the ears of their prisoners.

The negro soldiers in this sector recently had an example of German treachery when a German patrol attacked after shouting "Kamerad." They are now thoroughly determined to have their revenge.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 10.—General Pershing's communiqué for yesterday, which was received tonight at the War Department, follows:

"Headquarters, American Expeditionary Forces, Sept. 9.

"Section A—In the Woevre a hostile patrol which attacked one of our posts was repulsed. Elsewhere the day was uneventful.

"Section B—There is nothing to report in this section."

AMERICAN SHIP SUNK WHILE UNDER CONVOY

U-Boat Makes Daring Attack on Former Austrian Steamship—Crew of 80 Saved by Warships.

LONDON, Sept. 10.—The American steamship Dora, formerly under the Austrian flag, was torpedoed and sunk on Sept. 4, approximately 400 miles off the French coast as the result of an attack on a cargo convoy. The crew was saved.

The steamship was struck at 6:20 o'clock in the morning. A calm sea enabled all of the crew of 85 to escape. They were picked up by destroyers.

The submarine daringly took up a position about 150 yards from the starboard side of the convoy column and about an equal distance from the nearest destroyer and fired at the Dora, which was heading a column of three vessels.

The lookout reported seeing a periscope just after the wake of the tordepo was discovered, but nothing more was seen of the submarine. The torpedo struck aft, throwing the cargo of army supplies as high as the mast tops, but only one member of the crew was hurt.

The escorting ships immediately dropped numerous depth charges where it was believed the torpedo came from. Owing to the speed with which the warships acted and the close proximity of the U-boat, it is considered possible that the submarine was either destroyed or badly damaged.

This attack is somewhat different from the recent methods of U-boats in firing on lone vessels and giving no attention to protected convoys, and it shows more reckless daring in an effort to sink convoyed boats than has been usual during the last few months.

The Dora was one of the Austrian Lloyd Company's freight steamships seized by the United States Government in New York after war had been declared. She was of 7,037 gross tonnage, 411 feet long, 51 feet beam, 26 feet depth of hold, and was built at Trieste in 1913.

NEW YORKER DECORATED.

Sergeant Levas Receives D. S. C. for Gallantry Under Fire.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 10.—Sergeant James Levas, a cousin of Lewis Rossotos of 306 East Fifty-sixth Street, New York, has been cited by General Pershing for gallantry and has won a distinguished service cross. He is the only New Yorker in a list of twenty-two so decorated, given out by the War Department tonight.

"Between Berzy Le Sec and Soissons, on July 19," says the citation of Sergeant Levas, who belonged to a machine gun battalion, "he took charge of his platoon after his commander was killed. Soon afterward he himself was wounded, but he dressed his own wound and continued forward. In a later advance directed by him he was severely wounded, but placed his gun in position, looked after the security of his men, and reported those facts personally to his commanding officer before permitting himself to be taken to a dressing station."

WASHINGTON, Sept. 10. — Distinguished Service crosses have been awarded by General Pershing to twenty-two additional men of the army for acts of heroism and gallantry. URGES BANKERS' EXEMPTION

American Association Suggests That Members File Claims.

The American Bankers Association, whose headquarters are in this city, will send out today to its more than 19,000 members a memorandum regarding the draft, in which the suggestion is made that institutions file with the boards claims for exemption or deferred classification on behalf of their officers and employes, in view of the fact that so many men are reluctant to make their own claims. The memorandum points out that bank men are not exempt, because they happen to be employed by banks, and that the right to exemption or deferred classification depends on whether or not their particular services are necessary to the maintenance of the national welfare.

The memorandum of the American Bankers Association says in part:

"The following advice has been received from our representative in Washington:

"The Provost Marshal General has ruled that banking is an occupation necessary to the maintenance of the national welfare, and that skilled officers and employes of banks may claim exemption or deferred classification, under the new draft law, on the ground that their services are vital to the continuance of the business in which they are engaged.

"The Provost Marshal General states that waiving the right to be placed in a deferred classification is a mistaken act of patriotism. He urges every person affected by the law to state frankly and honestly his exemption status, as by so doing he will aid materially in the task of classifying registrants.

"Therefore, bank officers and employes whose services are essential to the business should not hesitate, for fear of criticism, to claim exemption or deferred classification on occupational grounds. To do otherwise would be a hindrance rather than a help at this time."

APPROVE PROHIBITION BILL.

House Committeemen Vote to Admit Italian Wine Until May.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 10.—Wartime prohibition moved a step nearer today when the House Agricultural Committee decided to report favorably the Food Production bill, including the amendment added by the Senate making prohibition effective July 1, 1919. The committee inserted a provision permitting the importation of Italian wine until May 1, 1919, as requested yesterday by the Italian Government through the State Department. As passed by the Senate, the bill would stop importation immediately. Senate amendments to appropriation items in the bill were disapproved by the committee.

Prohibition leaders in Congress expect the House to follow the committee's recommendation and send the measure to conference with no issue on the "dry" rider.

Senator Sheppard of Texas said later there would be no opposition to the amendment permitting importation of wines until May 1.

Government Advertising

Even our own government needs advertising.

The greatest leaders of men realize best the value of common knowledge and the solidarity that comes from a common understanding.

The tremendous Red Cross offering to humanity came from the hearts of the American people, but without leadership, without publicity, without common understanding and common knowledge, we would have fallen far short of that gigantic outpouring of treasure.

From the sublime to the ridiculous, all Good Will rests on common knowledge, and Good Will may be created in time of war or in time of peace.

NEW PEACE OFFER BY MINISTER BURIAN

"animated the glorious troops and helped the brave population at home to bear all sufferings and privations."

Prince von Wedel, the German Ambassador to Austria-Hungary, expressed the hope that a trustful and harmonious collaboration of diplomacy and the press would succeed in promoting and reinforcing the brilliantly proved friendship between Austria-Hungary and Germany.

Fears for People's Morale.

LONDON, Sept. 10.—"Popular confidence is tottering" and "We may win" are significant phrases made in a speech at Dresden on Monday by Count von Vitzthum d'Eckstad, the Foreign Minister of Saxony, according to a dispatch from Amsterdam to the Exchange Telegraph Company. He added:

"The more we speak of peace the further away it is. The enemy's means of success have plunged him into a kind of warlike folly which makes conciliation impossible. * * * We must, therefore, hold out. We can trust the army and the high command, but popular confidence is tottering. Why? Because Germany, having no enemy in the Fatherland, becomes too oblivious of the risks incidental to war.

"We must deal more energetically with enemy agents in our midst, put forth all our strength into the war, and forget our differences. Then we may win."

CZERNIN'S PEACE PLEA.

Says "We Must Not Stray from a Peace by Understanding."

LONDON, Sept. 11.—Fuller reports of Count Czernin's interview in the Vienna Neue Freie Presse, which, which, according to some Vienna newspapers, was warmly approved, if not actually inspired by Emperor Charles, show that Count Czernin declared, among other things:

"We must not again try to stray from peace by understanding, or otherwise the war will continue until friend and foe alike have perished."

"The opposition to disarmament," Count Czernin is quoted as saying, "is the greatest test of all obstacles to peace. Therefore, I regard this opposition as a serious mistake."

Concerning the League of Nations, Count Czernin said:

"I must admit that the league of nations is envisaged by Entente statesmen and intends to secure Entente predominance and therefore is inacceptable to us. But I deny that no single form could be found that would impose equal rights and duties upon all States."

Count Czernin concluded his interview with a call for peace as follows:

"From the banks of the Danube this call ought to go forth to the world: 'Wake up, wake up from the bad dreams of blood and force, for a new and better future must be shaped. War as a political means must be combatted.' The day will come when millions in all countries will repeat this call."

CHICAGO MAIL HERE IN 8 HOURS' FLIGHT

Pilot Reaches Belmont Park and Then Starts for Washington.

BRINGS LETTERS TO TIMES

Second Plane from West Fell at Hicksville, L. I., in Dark—Pilot Slightly Hurt.

Pilot Max Miller, who started from Chicago Monday morning for New York with 2,000 pieces of mail in his airplane, reached Belmont Park yesterday at 1:22 A. M. His actual flying time was seven hours and fifty-two minutes. He was compelled to spend the night at Lockhaven, Penn., his second step, on account of radiator trouble. The last stretch of the trip, about 200 miles, he made without untoward incident.

Miller took the air again at 12:10 P. M. for Washington, where he arrived at 2:07. The five sacks of mail for New York City, which weighed 150 pounds, were put on a train for Manhattan at 3:14, and a short time later were distributed to the addresses here.

Miller began his trip from Chicago on Monday at 6 A. M. After a short stop at Cleveland he started East again. His flying time between Chicago and Cleveland was three hours. After flying two and a half hours from Cleveland his machine developed the radiator trouble. He started to this city from Lockhaven yesterday morning at 9 o'clock.

Among the letters with which Miller started to Washington was one for President Wilson from the President of the Aero Club of Minneapolis, William Brooks. The Minneapolis mail was delivered to Miller at Chicago by one of the members of the Flying Circus of aviators, who have been making flights recently in the West.

Two of the letters brought to New York by Miller were addressed to THE NEW YORK TIMES. One was from A. S. Beck, managing editor of The Chicago Tribune. It was in reply to a letter sent, with copies of THE NEW YORK TIMES, to Mr. Beck by the airplane which recently flew from New York to Chicago. Mr. Beck said:

I am glad to receive your letter of greetings via airplane mail and to send you this response by the same aerial route. Doubtless you have noted that the second trip from New York carrying mail by the sky line arrived in Chicago after ten hours of flying time.

The copies of THE NEW YORK TIMES which were brought in the first pouch have been displayed in the business office windows of The Tribune—tangible evidence of a historic step in the art of travel and transportation.

The second letter was from Henry Woodhouse, member of the Board of Governors of the Aero Club of America and editor and publisher of Flying, a monthly magazine, and Aerial Age, a weekly. The writer says that the Aero Club "urged the extension of the aerial mail mainly as a military expedient to train aviators in cross-country and night flying and to utilize the aeronautic manufacturing facilities, which were partly idle. After recounting the results of the New York-Washington aerial mail service, he continues:

This epoch making first trip of the New York-Cleveland-Chicago Aerial Mail Line affords us a splendid opportunity to express our hearty appreciation of the energetic and patriotic efforts which THE NEW YORK TIMES has been making, on behalf of national preparedness and to develop the Aerial Mail Service.

It is hardly necessary to point out that now that we have airplanes capable of lifting fifteen tons and going at a speed of about 100 miles an hour, the general application of aircraft for transportation is to come fast. A few days ago a dispatch quoted John D. Ryan, the energetic Director of Aircraft Production, as saying that there is a type of airplane under construction which is to be equipped with four Liberty Motors, or 1,700 horsepower. Such an air cruiser would probably be capable of lifting close to 40,000 pounds, and the limit in size has by no means been reached. A 5,000 horsepower cruiser may cleave the air in a year.

Delivery of mail across the Atlantic and across the Continent may be as common next year at this time as the delivery of mail by airplane on the New York-Philadelphia-Washington route is today. The fact that the radius of airplanes is extending to 2,000 miles, and may extend to 4,000 miles within two years, brings hope for closer understanding between the nations after the war, due to faster transportation and intercommunication, but also brings the menace of disaster which may befall our generation if the control of the air should be gained by a country like Germany. As a matter of fact, it is known that Germany is planning extensive aerial mail, express, and passenger lines to employ the output of her aircraft factories after the war. Germany's plans are extensive enough to employ tens of thousands of large aircraft. This would give her a reserve air fleet large enough to blow England, France, Italy, and the cities on the American Continent off the map over night. As was brought out in the House of Commons by Lord Montague aircraft can be turned from vehicles of transportation to war machines by the simple process of substituting bombs as cargo. A nation that overlooks that fact may pay dearly for it over night. We all hope, of course, that some agreement will be reached between the nations which will guarantee against such horror as the bombing of a nation out of existence, but the present war has shown that hope does not save nations from the outrages of its aggressors.

Edward V. Gardner, pilot of the second air mail plane that left Chicago yesterday morning, was slightly injured with his mechanician Edward Raddle, when their plane fell at Hicksville, L. I., last night while the men were trying to find their landing place at Belmont Park in the dark. They were taken to a hotel in the village and attended by a physician, who sent them to the Nassau Hospital. It was said there that their injuries were only slight bruises and scratches, and that the men would be out in a few days. Raddle had a few small burns on his back.

H. L. Hartung and other officials of the air mail, who were keeping flares and lights burning at the Belmont Park field to guide the airplane to its landing, went at once to Hicksville when they received word that the machine had fallen there. They carried the mail to safety and aided in attending the injured aviators.

The aviators had flown from Lockhaven, Penn., at a height of about 7,000 feet, but when they reached Long Island their gasoline ran short, and it was because of the lack of speed in their machine that they were unable to find their landing place.

CHICAGO, Sept. 10.—Edward V. Gardner, aerial mail carrier, left Chicago for New York at 6:25 A. M. today, carrying with him Edward Ewdal, his mechanician, and sixty-eight pieces of mail, weighing four pounds. Both he and his aid wore electrically heated clothes furnished by Captain B. B. Lipsner, Superintendent of Aerial Mail Service, who saw them off at Grant Park.

Captain Lipsner left for Washington today. He said that he was highly pleased with the initial trip of the new aero mail service, and that he believed Chicago within a year would be a centre of aerial activity, not alone in the mail service, but in aeronautics generally.

BOUNDARY LIMITS OF DRAFT DISTRICTS

Territory Covered by Each of the Local Boards in City's Five Boroughs.

WARNING TO REGISTRANTS

Each Man Subject to the Draft Must Register in the District in Which He Lives.

The following are the boundaries of the 189 draft districts of New York City. In some of these districts there will be only one registration place; in others anywhere from two to a dozen places have been arranged for. Under the law a man must register in the district in which he makes his home and Draft Director Martin Conboy pointed out last night that registrants should bear this important fact in mind and make sure that they are in their own districts before registering. In many instances parts of the same street are in different districts.

Registration takes place tomorrow, between 7 A. M. and 9 P. M. All men who have attained their eighteenth birthday and have not passed their forty-sixth must register unless already in service.

In most of these districts there are many registration places. The location of all these was published in last SUNDAY'S TIMES.

READY TO REGISTER MEN OF 52 TONGUES

Director Conboy Has 12,000 Helpers Assigned to Assist the Chief Registrars.

Martin Conboy, Director of the Draft for New York City, announced last night that everything was ready for registering the 900,000 men between the new draft limit ages tomorrow. Mr. Conboy said the arrangements provided for registering men speaking fifty-two different languages, and that despite the size of the task he expected to have the registration completed by 9 o'clock tomorrow night. Extra registrars and interpreters will be mobilized at central headquarters in Manhattan, the Bronx, and Brooklyn, with automobiles ready to take them to any district in which the registration may assume unexpected proportions.

In response to a request of the Draft Director most of the large corporations and other concerns employing large numbers of men of draft age have agreed to give them time off to register so as to decrease the last minute rush tomorrow night. The Stock and Cotton Exchanges will be closed tomorrow.

The arrangements provide, Mr. Conboy said, one registrar for every eighty registrants in the city. Twelve thousand persons have been named to help the chief registrars. This army of registrars, interpreters, and clerks has been organized into twenty-seven units, each in charge of a chief registrar. In addition practically every teacher in the public schools will assist the registration boards. The schools will be closed tomorrow.

The returns from the 189 registration districts will be received in Mr. Conboy's office on the sixth floor of the Hall of Records. An effort will be made to have complete returns ready for transmission to General Crowder in Washington by midnight.

Several of the district draft boards announced new registration places for their districts yesterday. These boards, all of them in Manhattan, with the new places to register, follow:

All British subjects in the United States between the ages of 18 and 45 inclusive, not already registered under the draft law, and whether exempted by the British Ambassador or not, must register, it was announced yesterday by the British Bureau of Information.

Those British subjects registered before July 30, 1918, may apply for exemption to the British Ambassador before Sept. 29, it was ruled; those registered Aug. 24, before Sept. 24, and those registered before Sept. 4, before Oct. 16.

WARNS SLACKER EMPLOYERS

Threat of Exposure to Follow Refusal to Obey Federal Regulations.

The displeasure of the United States Government will be visited in full measure on any employer of labor who fails to abide by the requirements of the United States Employment Service. This was indicated yesterday by Federal-State Director Henry D. Sayer at the final conference of New York State representatives of the Federal Employment Service held at 220 Fifth Avenue in answer to the question, "What power have the Community Labor Boards to enforce the orders of the United States Employment Service against a slacker employer?" Director Sayer answered that the Government had no power to send offending employers to jail, and continued:

"The service is not without power to enforce its decrees any more than the President is without power to take any action necessary to prosecute the war. There is no law on the subject to the effect that we can take the offender to court. But there is a three-fold kick, so to speak, in the power of the Government—the control of fuel, the control of raw material, and the control of transportation. There is a further very potent instrumentality which has been described as pitiless publicity, and if there be any concern in New York State, no matter how powerful or great, that may be unpatriotic enough to disregard the labor program that Washington has prescribed for helping to win this war, that firm will be held up to the scorn and ridicule and derision of the people, as it should be."

MAMARONECK, N. Y., Sept. 10.—Cardinal Farley, who has been seriously ill in his Summer home here, is now permitted to be out of bed a few hours every day. His improvement continues to be slow, but steady, his secretary, Mgr. Carroll, said today.

PRICE is becoming such an important factor that it behooves every man to pay more attention to what he gets for his money when he buys

CLOTHES

But how can you judge? Do you know anything about clothes? What they are made of; how they are made; the difference between custom-made and ready-to-wear; and the different standards in the making of ready-to-wear clothes?

In these critical times, false pride and foolish prejudices must be swept aside. Facts are the things that count. And if you overlook facts, the fault is yours.

For sixty-three years, clothing men generally have acknowledged the superiority of

Stein-Bloch Smart Clothes

Such a record must have some basis for its justification. It is amply justified by a record of quality that in all these years has never been deviated from, and that will continue to be maintained.

In our shops there are more than sixty separate and distinct tailoring operations in the making of an ordinary sack coat. And each operation is performed by a skilled worker who knows how to do, and can do, that particular bit of tailoring better than any one else, because of fingers that have been trained through years of practice.

THE STEIN-BLOCH CO. is a year-'round organization—giving steady employment to its workers. It does not have to depend upon that uncertain and unreliable class of floating labor from which the two-season shops must draw their recruits.

As a result, we have the finest mastercraftsmen in the tailoring trade—tailors who have been working at our benches twenty and twenty-five, and some as long as thirty years. There are families where all the adults are at work together under our roof—with three generations of the same family working side by side.

Compare such conditions with conditions as you find them in most tailoring shops—custom or ready-to-wear—and you will better appreciate what we mean when we say that our employees take as much pride in making the finest clothes as you take in wearing them.

STEIN-BLOCH SMART CLOTHES set a standard of quality that is not surpassed by even the finest custom tailoring. There are no better materials. There can be no better tailoring. And Stein-Bloch styles are the standard of the clothing industry.

These are not idle statements to mislead.

They are facts to lead you in the right direction.

We can prove them. You can verify them for yourself at a cost of very little time and effort.

Add to these facts the advantages of seeing yourself in the suit before you buy, and of having a double guarantee—ours and that of an honest reliable dealer.

Will you try on a Stein-Bloch when you buy your next suit?

TRIBUTE BY PARIS TO DR. DAMROSCH

Conductor First Foreigner to Lead Orchestra in Hall of Conservatoire.

CAMP TOUR INTERRUPTED

All Transportation in France Was Needed for American Forces Bound for the Front.

Dr. Walter Damrosch, who arrived at an Atlantic port this week from France, rejoined his family at East Hampton, L. I., yesterday after a European experience such as has been experienced by few musicians since the war. Dr. Damrosch, on the eve of sailing for home, was able to be of service to General Pershing in holding an examination of 200 bandmasters and musicians for the American Expeditionary Forces. He went over in June, intending to conduct concerts at the American army rest camps with an orchestra of Frenchmen from the famous Colonne, Lamoureux, and Pasdeloup organizations, eighty of whose members had been assembled in Paris by Maurice de Villiers, with a guarantee fund for their tour provided by Harry Harkness Flagler, President of the Symphony Society of New York.

When mid-July brought a sudden turn of the war in favor of the Allies, all transportation facilities were at once needed for American forces bound for the front, and the orchestra plan was to that extent abandoned. Dr. Damrosch, however, conducted concerts in Paris, one being a gala event on the French national holiday, July 14, in the hall of the Conservatoire, which had never until that day been occupied, it was said, by a foreign conductor. Paris itself was threatened by the German drive when Dr. Damrosch arrived there, but he witnessed the city's return to something like its ordinary mode of life as General Foch's counterblows sent the enemy toward the frontier.

Dr. Damrosch had Mlle. Nadia Boulanger, Messrs. Henri Casadesus, Alfred Cortot, Robert Schmitz, and Joseph Jemain as assisting artists in his concert at the Conservatoire, the profits of which went to the French Red Cross. The performance, which began with "The Star-Spangled Banner" and closed with the "Marseillaise," included the Symphony No. 3 of Saint-Saens, a suite for viole d'amour by Lorenziti, the "Afternoon of a Faun," by Debussy, and the "Symphonic Variations" of César Franck. Mlle. Boulanger assisted at the organ in the Saint-Saëns symphony, and Dr. Damrosch later became acquainted with the music of her sister, Lili Boulanger, a composer whom he hopes to introduce to American audiences this year. Mlle. Boulanger died four months ago and all of musical France went into mourning for her.

"I think that Lili Boulanger is the greatest woman composer the world has ever seen," Dr. Damrosch said recently at his residence, 146 East Sixty-first Street. "Though only 19 years old, she had composed some remarkable works. I heard some of them in Paris and was greatly impressed by them, especially her dramatic scene, 'Faust and Helena.' The Symphony Society will introduce Mlle. Boulanger's music to New York this Winter with this scene. I am also planning for the New York Oratorio Society to give her choral works, 'On the Death of a Soldier' and 'Hymn to the Sun.'"

"I shall be particularly glad to do this," Dr. Damrosch continued, "because I recently made the statement that I did not think there would ever be a great woman composer. I was partly right. We have no woman Brahms nor Beethoven. But I think there are great possibilities of it, now that I have heard some of the works of Lili Boulanger."

All France, Dr. Damrosch said, had become boundlessly enthusiastic for everything American since American troops made their heroic stand at Château-Thierry. "When I reached Paris in June," he said, "it seemed deserted. More than a million of its inhabitants had moved out, and preparations were being made for a possible evacuation. Now everything is changed. The fact that a quarter of a million American troops are reaching France every month has put new spirit into the people. They are in a glow of enthusiasm for everything American."

To illustrate the admiration of the French for America, Dr. Damrosch told of an incident at the Fourth of July celebration in Paris, which, he said, was an epoch-making event. He said:

"While I was standing on the street watching the parade a little French girl, who had recognized me as an American, crept up to me and placed something in my hand. When I looked at it I found that it was a small quantity of cotton which she had rolled out thin and on which she had painted an American and a French flag."

In speaking of the enthusiastic reception which he himself had met with in France, Dr. Damrosch insisted that it was a tribute to him as an American, not as a musician.

"I went over to France in June," he said, "with ample means from Harry Harkness Flagler to organize an orchestra of French musicians and give concerts in the American rest camps. When I arrived in Paris I found that, on account of the military exigency, it was not possible for me to get railway accommodations to carry a large orchestra with their instruments about the country. Every inch of space was needed for soldiers and war materials.

"So I decided to give several concerts in Paris and then to return to America. Then I set about recruiting eighty men for my orchestra. At the first rehearsal only forty-three appeared. I began to think then that I should not even be able to give my concerts. I spoke to the men that had come to the rehearsal and asked their aid. 'All that I ask,' I told them, 'is that you lend me eighty men for a few days. America has sent you a million men and stands ready to send you millions more. Now can't you manage to find me just eighty for a short time?'

"In a few days I had the orchestra complete. In it there were half a dozen of the most eminent French artists who had never played in an orchestra. They volunteered their services merely because I was an American conductor, and every person in France is anxious to show his appreciation of what America is doing."

SWEARS DEBS UPHELD ANTI-WAR PROGRAM

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Sept. 10.—The Government's case against Eugene V. Debs, the Socialist leader, who is charged with violation of the Espionage act in a speech at Canton, Ohio, on June 16, was made plain in the United States District Court here today, and District Attorney Wertz said that he would complete his evidence tomorrow forenoon.

Judge Westenhaver fined seven persons today who applauded in the courtroom yesterday. Rose Pastor Stokes, Mrs. Margaret Prevey, and J. J. Fried were fined $25, and the others $10. Mrs. Stokes and Mrs. Prevey at first insisted they would go to jail as a matter of principle, but friends argued them out of it.

In his Canton speech Debs prefaced his remarks with the attaement that "I must be careful what I say, and more careful how I say it."

His alleged offense specifically is that by indirection and insinuation in this speech it was his intent to affirm the "war program" of the Socialist Party at St. Louis in June, 1917. This program was adopted by a referendum of the party, and is outspoken in opposing the war, and, among other things, pledges the party to oppose conscription. Although in his speech Debs evaded direct affirmation of the "war program," witnesses were introduced to show that this was really what he intended to convey with due regard to careful and lawful language.

M'ADOO ASKS LAW TO HELP BOND SALES

000,000,000, raising the limit $2,000,000,000, so as to float the 1919 series.

Fourth—That one person may be allowed to own not exceeding $1,000 of each series of War Savings Stamps.

Fifth—That authority be granted to the Secretary of the Treasury to make arrangements in, or with, foreign countries to stabilize foreign exchange, thereby giving greater flexibility in Treasury operations.

Sixth—That President Wilson be empowered to investigate, regulate, and prohibit, by means of license or otherwise, transactions in foreign exchange and the export, hoarding, melting, or earmarking of gold or silver coin or bullion or currency.

Seventh—That the law limiting the amount of loans which national banks may make to any one borrower to one-tenth of the capital stock be modified.

In his letter to Chairman Kitchin urging this legislation, Secretary McAdoo discloses that he has been much impressed by the success of the plan adopted in Canada for maintaining the market value of Canada's Victory bonds, saying:

"I am not without hope that some such plan may be made effective in the United States, although conditions here are very different, and it will not do to depend too much upon the experience of our neighbor."

Mr. McAdoo says that to make such a plan effective "it would be necessary to put an end to dealings in bonds on the exchanges" and substitute an active and adequate market through the banking houses of the United States, acting in close co-operation with "an instrumentality of the Government, probably the War Finance Corporation." At the same time, he asserts, it would be "necessary to put an end to the numerous schemes, many of them actually fraudulent, for inducing inexperienced holders of Liberty Bonds to exchange them for merchandise or property of less inherent value through carrying the promise of a higher value or a higher income return."

Text of the Secretary's Letter.

Here is the text of Mr. McAdoo's letter to Chairman Kitchin, a copy of which has also been sent to Chairman Simmons of the Senate Finance Committee:

"Sept. 5, 1918.

"Dear Mr. Kitchin:

"In connection with the tax bill now before the Congress, and without awaiting its enactment, I feel constrained to bring to your attention a matter affecting the Fourth Liberty Loan. The delay in the enactment of the tax bill, the fact that the rates of income surtaxes, to which the interest on Liberty bonds, except the First Liberty Loan, is subject, will be higher, and the rate of normal income tax on unearned income will be lower, than I had contemplated, materially affect the prospects of the Fourth Liberty Loan.

"I do not mention these things critically, for I realize that the Ways and Means Committee have labored faithfully and earnestly during the hot Summer months on the consideration and preparation of the tax bill. I have already expressed my acceptance of a normal tax of 12 per cent. without a differential against unearned incomes, and in principle I am now agreed with the committee that a substantial increase in surtax rates will be necessary in order to produce the indicated revenue.

"The market price of Liberty bonds, which responded favorably to the suggestion of an increased normal tax, from which the bonds will be exempt by their terms, was depressed by the newspaper reports of a greatly increased surtax, to which the interest on the bonds will be subject. I have been anxious to stabilize the interest rate upon Government bonds, believing that by so doing we should be reducing the cost of the war, not only today for ourselves, but, in the future, for ourselves and for our brave men who are fighting in France and who will have little or no opportunity to accumulate and invest in Liberty bonds, though they must upon their return join the army of taxpayers who must pay this interest. I have sought to avoid the issue of bonds at such a rate and upon such terms as might result ultimately, when the war is won, in the accumulation of great wealth in the hands of a relatively small proportion of our population, carrying interest at a high rate and exempt from taxes.

"The magnificent patriotism of our people and the fervor and efficiency of the Liberty Loan organization have made it possible to place the Liberty bonds in the hands of many millions of persons who had never before been investors in securities of any kind. Bonds of the Third Liberty Loan received the widest possible distribution, and I feel sure that we all owe a duty to the millions of subscribers of small means not merely to pay them a fair rate of interest, which we are doing, but to take such measures as may be necessary to insure to them a market for the bonds at approximately par in case their necessities are such as to force them to realize upon the investment which they have made in the Government's obligations. The bond purchase fund, which was provided in the Third Liberty Bond bill, has been very useful in stabilizing the price of Liberty bonds, but it has not been, and we could not expect it to be, effective to sustain the price against adverse developments and in the face of the fact that the Government's recurring demands upon the absorptive power of the investment community are in such proportions and of such frequency as to prevent the development of any important buying power in the investment market between Liberty Loan campaigns.

Canada's Victory Bond Plan.

"I have been much impressed by the success of the plan which has been adopted in Canada for the purpose of maintaining the market value of Canada's Victory bonds. A careful study of that plan is being made in the Treasury and by the War Finance Corporation, and I am glad to learn that the bankers of the country have been making a similar study. I am not without hope that some such plan may be made effective in the United States, although conditions here are very different and it will not do to depend too much upon the experience of our neighbor. In any event, it will not do to proceed in this matter abruptly, nor without the creation of an immense organization country-wide in its ramifications. To make such a plan effective, it would be necessary to put an end to dealings in bonds on the exchange, and accordingly to substitute an active and adequate market through the banking houses of the United States, acting in close co-operation with an instrumentality of the Government, probably the War Finance Corporation. At the same time it would be necessary to put an end to the numerous schemes, many of them actually fraudulent, for inducing inexperienced holders of Liberty bonds to exchange them for merchandise or property of less inherent value, though carrying the promise of a higher value or a higher income return. In order that the Treasury may be placed in a position to carry such plans as these into effect, if they should be found expedient, I suggest for your consideration the present enactment of appropriate legislation.

"Last year I had the privilege of explaining to you and your colleagues on the Ways and Means Committee very fully the reasons why I advocated making the income from Liberty bonds subject to income surtaxes. I still believe that that course was wise and that the arguments advanced in favor of it were sound. It will not do, however, to press any theory, however sound, to an extremity, and it is obvious that as a practical matter we cannot keep the interest rate on Government bonds stationary, or substantially so, and continue indefinitely to increase the surtaxes, to which the income from these bonds is subject, without at the same time limiting the market for Liberty bonds to those who have little or no surtaxes to pay. Since the bond and tax legislation which was under discussion in the Summer of 1917 and which was enacted in the Fall of 1917, the interest on Liberty bonds has been increased only one-quarter of 1 per cent, whereas the surtaxes rates now in contemplation would carry an increase in the taxes to which the interest on the bonds is subject, rising above 150 per cent. increase in some classes. Surtaxes on income from $5,000 to $200,000 would under the new Tax bill on the average be doubled. In order to give the numerous small holders of Liberty bonds the advantage of a market upon which they may sell their bonds in case of necessity, and also to attract subscriptions from the great number of investors of ample means, but not of great wealth, it would be necessary immediately to increase the interest rate or to neutralize the increased surtaxes by freeing the bonds to a limited extent from such taxes.

Limited Surtax Exemption.

"I recommend that a portion of the income of these bonds should be free from surtaxes for the period of the war and for a brief interval thereafter. This course would make it possible to meet the exigencies of the present situation and to counterbalance the adverse effect on the market value of Liberty bonds of the increased surtax rates, and at the same time would not be open to the very grave objection which exists against any unlimited or permanent exemption, which would deprive the Government of the United States of the power to meet its necessities in the future by surtaxes on incomes derived from Liberty bonds. If the surtax rates should be reduced after the war the interest which is fixed in the bonds would continue. Having, as I believe, in fairness to the patriotic people who will subscribe for the Fourth Liberty Loan, to choose between one of two methods for making the bonds more attractive, neither of which is wholly satisfactory, I am inclined to recommend at this time that the holders of these bonds be given a qualified and limited freedom from surtaxes in respect to their holdings, rather than that the interest rate should be increased. I believe that on the whole the wise and expedient thing is to grant a limited exemption calculated to counterbalance the increase in surtax rates now contemplated, and which I believe will be only temporary, rather than to increase the interest rate on Liberty bonds for the life of the bonds.

"I am influenced in this determination by the fact that it continues necessary to sell Liberty bonds in competition with billions of dollars of bonds of the United States, the various States and municipalities which are wholly exempt from surtaxes, as well as from all forms of taxation, so that the person whose income is subject to surtaxes is apt to make a comparison of the income return from Liberty bonds which he is asked to subscribe for, not with the income return from corporation and other securities such as carry no exemption from taxation, but with the income return from wholly exempt bonds of the United States and the various States and municipalities. Under the existing state of the Constitution and laws, such a comparison cannot be avoided. In those circumstances, we must find a middle ground between the view which would refuse all exemptions from surtaxes and the practical necessity of taking into account the fact that such exemptions will in any event be gained, as surtaxes are steadily increased, by shifting funds into Governmental, State, and municipal bonds, the income from which is exempt from surtaxes as well as from normal taxes.

"In granting such exemption I think appropriate action should be made to the end that those who subscribe for bonds of the Fourth Liberty Loan may, to the extent of a specified portion of their holdings, participate in the exemption in respect to bonds of the First Liberty Loan converted, the Second Liberty Loan, converted and unconverted, and the Third Liberty Loan.

"Should these views commend themselves to the Congress, I believe that immediate action should be taken so that the status of the bonds of the Fourth Liberty Loan in respect to taxation may be promptly known. It is, in fact, imperative that this status should be quickly known.

Additional Recommendations.

"There are certain other matters to which I desire to call the attention of your committee at this time:

"The provisions of Section 8 of the Second Liberty Bond act, as amended by the Third Liberty Bond act, should be extended so as to authorize the Secretary to deposit the proceeds arising from the payment of war profits taxes with qualified depositary banks and trust companies in the United States in the same manner as the proceeds of income and excess profits taxes.

"The time has come to make provision for the sale of War Savings Certificates in 1919. The limit of $1,000 on the amount which may be held by any one person should be made to apply separately to the series which will be issued in 1919, so that one holder may own $1,000 of that series, in addition to $1,000 of the series of 1918. At the same time the limit of $2,000,000,000 now imposed on the aggregate amount of the issue should be enlarged, or, better, removed; for the necessary distribution of the War Savings Stamps among thousands of Post Offices and other agencies engaged in making sales over the counter may make the limit very embarrassing long before the cash receipts of the Treasury indicate that the limit is about to be reached.

"In the negotiations which I have had, and am having, with or in foreign countries in the effort to stabilize foreign exchange, I find myself seriously hampered because I am without the freedom of action which is possessed by the Finance Ministers of European countries. I may only sell bonds or Treasury certificates of indebtedness, which involves often international complications, and may not obtain banking credits nor operate as freely as may be necessary in the effort to stabilize exchange. Notwithstanding these restrictions, the Treasury has been able to make substantial progress in dealing with this difficult problem. I urge upon you, however, the incorporation in the law of the necessary authority to give greater flexibility to the operations of the Treasury in this respect.

"I believe it is highly desirable at this time that the President should be empowered to investigate, regulate, or prohibit, not only the export or earmarking of gold or silver coin or bullion or currency, but also the hoarding or melting thereof.

"Last March I called the attention of Congress to the importance of amending the provisions of Section 3200 of the Revised Statutes, limiting the amount of loans which national banks may make to any one borrower. A bill was reported by the Banking and Currency Committee of the House, H. R. 10691, passed by the House, and reported with amendments by the Committee on Banking and Currency of the Senate, but not acted upon by the Senate. The Senate did pass a bill, Senate 4099, dealing to a certain extent with the same subject matter, prior to the Senate Committee report on the House bill, and on the Senate bill no action has been taken by the House. It is essential that this matter be disposed of before the Fourth Liberty Loan is offered.

"By way of suggestion and in order the better to formulate my views for your consideration, I have taken the liberty of preparing a bill which would deal with the various points I have mentioned in this letter. A draft of this bill is inclosed. May I not ask that the Ways and Means Committee give these points its immediate attention with a view to the enactment of the necessary legislation, if my suggestions commend themselves to the committee, in ample time to become effective before the opening of the Fourth Liberty Loan campaign on Sept. 28? I feel that the success of this loan is deeply involved in this legislation.

"Mr. Leffingwell is fully informed of my views concerning these matters and is authorized to speak for me in my absence, should the committee desire my further information. Cordially yours,

"W. G. McADOO."

Text of the Draft of the Bill.

The tentative draft of the bill which Mr. McAdoo has submitted to Chairman Kitchin for the consideration of the Ways and Means Committee follows:

"An act to supplement an act approved July 9, 1918, entitled 'An Act to Authorize an Additional Issue of Bonds to Meet Expenditures for the National Security and Defense, and for the Purpose of Assisting in the Prosecution of the War, to Extend Additional Credit to Foreign Governments, and for Other Purposes.'

"Be it enacted by the Senate and the House of Representatives of the United States of America, in Congress assembled, that until the expiration of the calendar year ending Dec. 31 next following the calendar year in which shall occur the date of the termination of the war between the United States and the Imperial German Government, as defined in the Second Liberty Bond act, (1) the interest on an amount of bonds of the Fourth Liberty Loan the principal of which does not exceed $30,000 owned by any individual, partnership, association, or corporation shall be exempt from graduated additional income taxes, commonly known as surtaxes and excess profits and war profits taxes, now or hereafter imposed by the United States, upon the income or profits of individuals, partnerships, associations, or corporations, and (2) the interest on an amount of bonds of the First Liberty Loan converted, the Second Liberty Loan, converted and unconverted, and the Third Liberty Loan, the principal of which does not exceed $45,000 in the aggregate, owned by any individual, partnership, association, or corporation, shall be exempt from said taxes; provided, however, that no owner of bonds of the First, Second, or Third Liberty Loan shall be entitled to exemption under subdivision 2 of this paragraph in respect to the interest on an aggregate principal amount of such bonds exceeding one and one-half times the principal amount of bonds of the Fourth Liberty Loan originally subscribed for by such owner and still owned by him at the date of his tax return. The exemptions herein provided for are in addition to the exemption provided in the Second Liberty Bond Act in respect to the interest on an amount of bonds and certificates authorized by said act and amendments thereto, the principal of which does not exceed in the aggregate $5,000, and in addition to all other exemptions provided in said Second Liberty Bond Act.

"Sec. 2—That Section 6 of the Second Liberty Bond Act is hereby amended by striking out the figure '$2,000,000,000' and inserting in lieu thereof the figure '$4,000,000,000.' Said section is further amended by striking out the words 'and it shall not be lawful for any one person at any one time to hold War Savings Certificates to an aggregate amount exceeding $1,000,' and inserting in lieu thereof the words 'and it shall not be lawful for any one person at any one time to hold War Savings Certificates of any one series to an aggregate amount exceeding $1,000.'

"Sec. 3—That the provisions of Section 8 of the Second Liberty Bond Act, as amended by the Third Liberty Bond Act, shall apply to the proceeds arising from the payment of war profits taxes as well as income and excess profits taxes.

"Sec. 4.—That the Secretary of the Treasury may make arrangements in, or with, foreign countries to stabilize the foreign exchanges and to obtain foreign currencies and credits in such currencies, and he may use any such credits and foreign currencies for the purpose of stabilizing the foreign exchanges, and he may designate depositaries in foreign countries with which may be deposited, as he may determine, all or any part of the avails of any foreign credits or foreign currencies.

"Sec. 5.—That Clause (B) of Section 5 of the Trading with the Enemy act be, and hereby is, amended to read as follows:

(b) That the President may investigate, regulate, or prohibit, under such rules and regulations as he may prescribe, by means of licenses or otherwise, any transactions in foreign exchange or in bonds or certificates of indebtedness of the United States and the export, hoarding, melting, or earmarkings of gold or silver coin, or bullion, or currency, transfers of credit in any form, (other than credits relating solely to transactions to be executed wholly within the United States,) and transfers of evidences of indebtedness or of the ownership of property between the United States and any foreign country, whether enemy, ally of enemy, or otherwise, or between residents of one or more foreign countries, by any person within the United States; and he may require any such person engaged in any such transaction to furnish, under oath, complete information relative thereto, including the production of any books of account, contracts, letters, or other papers in connection therewith in the custody or control of such person, either before or after such transaction is completed.

Section 6—That Section 5200 of the Revised Statutes, as amended, be, and hereby is, amended to read as follows:

Section 5200.—The total liabilities to any association, or any person, or of any company, corporation, or firm for money borrowed, including in the liabilities of a company or firm the liabilities of the several members thereof, shall at no time exceed one-tenth part of the amount of the capital stock of such associations, actually paid in and unimpaired, and one-tenth part of its unimpaired surplus fund; provided, however, that (1) the discount of bills of exchange drawn in good faith against actually existing values, (2) the discount of commercial or business paper actually owned by the person negotiating the same, and (3) the purchase or discount of any note or notes secured by not less than a like face amount of bonds of the United States issued since April 24, 1917, or certificates of indebtedness of the United States, shall not be considered as money borrowed within the meaning of this section, but the total liabilities to any association, of any person, or of any company, corporation, or firm, upon any note or notes secured by such bonds or certificates of indebtedness, purchased or discounted by such association, shall not exceed ten per centum of its capital and surplus of such association, except subject to such rules, regulations, and limitations as may be established from time to time by the Controller of the Currency, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury.

"Section 7—That the short title of this act shall be 'Supplement to Fourth Liberty Bond Act.'"

WELCOMED BY BANKERS.

McAdoo Plan for Supporting Liberty Bonds Regarded as Sound.

Secretary McAdoo's suggestion that the amount of Liberty Bonds free of surtaxes on income be increased from $5,000 to $75,000 was received with much enthusiasm by local bankers last night. The opinion was unanimous that, if passed, the measure would supply an important stimulus for the forthcoming Liberty Loan by attracting subscriptions from those prospective buyers who could find relief therein from heavy inroads on their incomes, as well as lend a strong supporting influence to the Liberty bond market, which has so far been lacking. While the 3½s have been bid above 101 by the accumulations of wealthy men, the others have sagged until they are 5 points or so under par on the Stock Exchange.

The income which could be derived from the $75,000 bonds free of the surtaxes would amount in a typical case to $3,150 per year. In case of an income of $25,000, of which $3,150 was derived from Liberty bonds of the 4 and 4¼ per cent. issues, the saving would not be substantial, as compared with the current method of figuring the tax, but from that point onward to $200,000 or more of income the difference would be pronouncedly in favor of revenue derived from Liberty bond investments. Bankers who discussed the matter last night said that in these days of large demands on incomes for war purposes the tendency of every one was to save wherever the opportunity offered, and for this reason they believed that individuals of both large and moderate means would seize the opportunity of acquiring all the Liberty bonds they could afford in order to reduce surtaxes.

Investments of corporation surplus funds in the Government issues, it was stated, would be expanded. It was pointed out that the step proposed by the Secretary of the Treasury should cause many seekers of tax exempt bonds to devote to the Liberty loan market part of the attention that they have been giving to the tax-free municipal bond issues.

In proposing that measures be sought to stabilize the Liberty bond market similar, if possible, to those taken in Canada for the Victory bonds, Mr. McAdoo took cognizance of the study of the situation recently begun by a committee of bankers and bond men of the financial district. In Canada the market is controlled by the Government in co-operation with bond dealers, who are allowed a stated commission on bonds they dispose of to the public. So far, no announcement has been made of the progress toward a plan here, but it is known that an obstacle was found to following the Canadian procedure in the enormous amount of Liberty bonds outstanding, as compared with the $500,000,000 of Victory bonds.

Mr. McAdoo's suggestion in regard to legal provision for the Government in handling the foreign exchange market was considered here as expressing the desire of the Treasury Department for legal sanction of the proceedings now under way to stabilize the American dollar abroad. Representatives of the Treasury have been working in neutral countries of Europe for some months on this task and have attained notable results.

Questionable Statements which Condemn Charge Accounts

STATEMENTS are being advertised in the New York newspapers intended to discourage the admittedly convenient Charge Account system, so long in vogue in department stores, in order to justify the Deposit Account system.

The fundamental argument used against the Credit system is its cost of maintenance, while the argument proffered in favor of the Deposit Account system is that it adds nothing to the cost.

A Truth Yet an Untruth!

It is self-evident that it costs a certain percentage of every sale to maintain a Credit system. But it is equally axiomatic to state that it costs as much, if not more, to maintain a Deposit Account system. It is, therefore, manifestly unfair to infer that the elaborate banking system required to handle Deposit Accounts costs nothing, and for that reason merchandise can be sold just that much cheaper.

Deposit Accounts an Injustice to Cash Customers!

The anomaly in the Deposit Account system is very apparent. Since interest and an additional discount on all purchases are allowed under the Deposit Account system—instead of the much vaunted advantage of "one price to everybody and discounts to nobody"—it is very evident upon a moment's reflection that the cash customer pays more for merchandise by just that increment of interest and discount allowed to the Deposit Account Customer!

This is most inequitable and is an injustice which does not exist under the Charge Account system, where "one price to everybody" is a reality and not a figment.

Convenience of Charge Accounts to Customers

Charge Account conveniences—too numerous to mention in limited space—are acknowledged by patrons who enjoy them, and they know from price comparisons that it is positively untrue that they pay more for merchandise because of these manifold conveniences. The public cannot be convinced by specious phrases that a banking system costs less than a credit system, nor could any individual versed in modern business methods admit that credit is non-essential to its conduct.

SECRETARY M'ADOO ALSO CUT FOR SMITH

Indorsement of Wilson's Son-in-Law Regarded as Reflecting President's Views.

WAGNER ACTIVE IN CAMPAIGN

Candidate for Supreme Court Is Re-elected Chairman of Tammany's General Committee.

Another member of President Wilson's Cabinet—Secretary of the Treasury William G. McAdoo—has indorsed President of the Aldermanic Board Alfred E. Smith as Democratic candidate for Governor. Secretary of State Robert Lansing soon after the primaries sent his felicitations to the Democratic nominee and expressed hope that he would be elected. The McAdoo letter was written several days ago, but was made public only yesterday. Here it is:

The Secretary of the Treasury,
Washington.
Sept. 6, 1918.

Dear Mr. Smith: It gives me genuine pleasure to send you my warm congratulations upon your nomination as the Democratic candidate for Governor of the State of New York.

Your public career has qualified you, by training and experience, for this great office, and your ability and character fit you admirably for the discharge of its responsible duties.

All good wishes for your success.
With kind regards, I am cordially yours,
W. G. McADOO.

Hon. Alfred E. Smith, President Board of Aldermen, City of New York, New York, N. Y.

Both Secretary Lansing and Secretary McAdoo are New York State men. The only member of the Cabinet from this State not yet heard from is William C. Redfield, Secretary of Commerce. It was predicted by Mr. Smith's friends yesterday that other messages would be forthcoming from persons affiliated with the Federal Administration in positions of responsibility and high in the confidence of the President.

On account of the close personal relations between the President and Secretary McAdoo, who is his son-in-law, the McAdoo letter was regarded as proof that President Wilson himself is wholeheartedly in favor of Mr. Smith's election, even though Smith is a Tammany man and the relations between Tammany and Mr. Wilson have not been cordial. While friends of Mr. Smith generally commented on the effect the indorsements from Washington would have toward solidifying Democrats of all grades and shades behind the candidacy of the Aldermanic President, some expressed fear that they would tend also to solidify the Republicans behind Governor Whitman more strongly than would be the case had they not been forthcoming.

"'Al' must depend on Republican defection from Whitman for his success on Election Day," said a friend of the Democratic nominee last night. "Whether Republicans will support him in any considerable number if his election should mean an indorsement of the Wilson Administration and a lift for 1920 remains to be seen."

It was learned yesterday that Senator Robert F. Wagner, although he has been nominated for Justice of the Supreme Court, will be re-elected Chairman of the Tammany General Committee when that body meets to organize tomorrow night. It furnished food for comment even in Tammany circles, but Senator Wagner said he was prepared to accept the place should he be elected again.

"I do not see," said Senator Wagner, 'why the fact that I have been nominated for a Judgeship should deter me from taking an active part in the campaign. I owe it to Al' and to the party to give them the benefit of my experience at Albany and my familiarity with the State government in this fight. Of course, if I am elected I shall resign as Chairman of the Democratic County Committee."

There are 11,902 members of the new Tammany General Committee. About half the members are women. Tammany Hall, where the meeting tomorrow night is to be held, cannot hold one-fourth of the committee members.

The date for the meeting of the Democratic State Committee was changed yesterday to Sept. 13, the day following the meeting of the Republican State Committee. The committee will hold its meeting at the Hotel Knickerbocker at noon. Alfred E. Smith and the other Democratic candidates on the State ticket will then receive formal notification of their nomination.

CLOSE RACE IN COLORADO.

DENVER, Sept. 10.—Early returns from today's State-wide primary indicated a close race between Governor Julius C. Gunter and Thomas Tynan for the Democratic nomination for Governor, with Tynan in the lead.

On the Republican ticket Oliver S. Shoup has a two to one lead over Charles Ballreach for Governor, and Lawrence Phipps has a commanding lead over Charles Waterman for United States Senator.

Pollock Named in South Carolina.

COLUMBIA, S. C., Sept. 10.—William P. Pollock of Cheraw was nominated for the short term in the United States Senate over Thomas H. Peeples in the Democratic runoff primary today. Mr. Pollock will succeed Senator Benet, who was appointed after the death of Senator Tillman. Representative Sam J. Nicholas apparently defeated Horace L. Bomar in the Fourth Congressional District by a narrow margin.

FIRST MEN CALLED TO BE 19-20, 32-36

dress to you some recommendations as to your share of responsibility in the classification of the new registrants under the Selective Service act. I have noticed, in the general expressions of the public attitude which reach this office, two frequent features which lead me to the present comments.

"One of these features is the belief that the process of awarding deferred classification to a registrant requires merely the filling out of the questionnaire, and that the Selective Service Boards will perceive the propriety of making the deferment, without the assistance furnished by the registrant's formal claim indicating the deferment desired.

"The other feature is the employer's failure to realize his responsibility to intervene in aiding the board's determination, and, therefore, to inform himself fully on all the considerations which should affect the decision as to deferment. Both of these features are due to a single larger fact, viz: A failure on the part of many to reflect on the industrial considerations governing deferred classification.

"1. As to the first-mentioned belief, it must be pointed out that if it were universally acted upon, the process of classification would be seriously hampered and delayed. Some one must indicate that the individual case is one which should arrest the special attention of the boards in respect to the registrant's occupational status. The boards do not possess a superhuman omniscience. Nor are they permitted by circumstances to devote unlimited time to the search of questionnaires for possible grounds of claim. In 1917, out of more than 3,000,000 registrants called, only 140,000 filed occupational claims, or 4.7 per cent., thus 95 per cent. of all registrants raised no question of such deferment. Under the questionnaire system the exact scrutiny of every page of this 95 per cent. of questionnaires presenting no occupational claims would have been an intolerable expenditure of time, involving a delay fatal to the speed and decisive action necessary for filling the army.

"The boards will do all that they possibly can on their own initiative to reach a just decision by a complete examination of the questionnaire even where no claim is expressly made; following in this respect the spirit of the Secretary of War's statement made before the House Commitee on Military Affairs on Aug. 19 last, 'It is not easily possible—it is, perhaps, not possible at all—to do that without some aids from the men affected; but as far as it is possible we ought to have the facts developed by the answers to the questions which the man makes and call on him for as little aid as we can in determining whether or not he is to be exempted.' A registrant is therefore at liberty, if he sees fit, to trust to the scrutiny of the boards to discover the necessity for his deferment.

"Nevertheless, the boards will welcome and will need all the aid that can be furnished by the indication of a claim made for diferment. With this aid, the process will become a simple and speedy one. Time and labor will not be wasted on needless search, and ample time will be gained for thorough attention to those cases explicitly raising a question of occupational deferment.

"But who is to make that claim? Ordinarily the registrant himself will indicate the claim on his questionnaire. But if through mistaken chivalry he should fail to do so another may make it for him. In industry, agriculture, or other occupations, this other person will naturally be his employer or some other representative in his associated group. And this brings me to the second feature above mentioned.

"2. Why should the employer, or third person, in such cases, make the claim? Because the employer in this situation represents the nation—because (in the statutory phrase) 'the maintenance of the military establishment or of national interest during the emergency' requires that some well-advised third person should look after that national interest, which the registrant himself may not have sufficiently considered.

"It is at this point that I wish to address to employers (and other representatives) the suggestion that they charge themselves, more systematically than hitherto, with this responsibility. I have above referred to such third persons as 'well advised,' and this is the place to emphasize to employers the importance of making themselves well advised for the execution of this duty.

"How many employers, having charge of some industrial or other occupational group, have hitherto taken pains to inform themselves systematically which of their employes are registrants and which are not? How many have studied carefully the required conditions for occupational deferment, as laid down in the President's regulations pursuant to the statute? How many have made it a point to survey their entire plant so as to single out the really indispensable individuals?

"With the oncoming of a more extensive registration, an even larger outlook is necessary. The general industrial conditions, the supply of skilled men in the industry at large, the possibilities of training substitutes, the availability of women workers—these are some of the considerations which bear directly on the need of occupational deferment as related to the need of the army.

"Moreover, it is often forgotten that the selective draft is only one element in the depletion of a particular industry's man power. A second and large element is found in the voluntary withdrawals for enlistment; how large this is may be seen from the circumstance that the total inductions by draft have reached some 2,000,000 while the total enlistments in army and navy amount to some 1,400,000—nearly three-quarters as many.

"A third element, very large, but unknown as to its precise extent, has been the transfer of labor power from one industry to another, i. e., into the distinctively war industries offering the inducement of higher wages. How relatively small, in actual effect, has been the effect of the selective draft is seen in the fact that, for all the occupations represented in the 8,700,000 classified registrants of January, 1918, the percentage of the entire Industrial population represented by the Class 1 registrants amounted to only 6 per cent. It ran as low as 3 per cent. for some occupations, and correspondingly higher for some other occupations; but the national average was only 6 per cent. Any notably larger depletions in particular industries must therefore have been due, partly to enlistments, and in probably greater degree to voluntary transfers into other industries.

"These other influences are therefore to be kept in mind by employers and others, in weighing the question whether the best solution in the national interest is to ask for the deferment of individuals or groups of men. Such deferments may assist the immediate situation in the particular establishment; but they merely force the army and navy to seek elsewhere for the same number of men thus deferred. The quantitative needs of the military forces are known and imperative; and any given quantity of deferments will ultimately have to be made up by the depletion of some other occupation. Thus, it becomes the employer's duty to consider these largest aspects of deferment, in seeking that solution of his own problem which best comports with the national interest.

"My present object is to urge upon employers the duty and responsibility of becoming well advised in all these matters—of equipping themselves with full information as to the extent to which their particular establishment is affected by the liability of registrants to military service—of observing the extent to which other influences of depletion have affected it and the degree in which other methods of supply can relieve that depletion—and of laying these facts and other pertinent ones before the industrial advisers now to be placed at each district board—to the end that those individuals or groups who are indispensable and irreplaceable should receive deferment, whether or not they have made claim for it, and that the army and the navy should not be deprived of its proper supply of man power by ill-considered deferments not absolutely demanded by the national interest.

"The cessation of enlistments will henceforth protect industry against one irregular and uncontrollable source of derangement. It will correspondingly throw upon the selective service system the greater responsibility for an intelligent and discriminating selection made in the light of industrial needs. But this responsibility is shared by employers and all who represent groups of workers. To fulfill this responsibility they must now prepare themselves even more carefully than hitherto. They will find the boards heartily ready to co-operate with them to the utmost.

"The keynote of purpose for all of us ought to be, and I am sure will be, that wise and profoundly significant phrase in the act of Congress under which we operate, 'The maintenance of the military establishment or the effective operation of the military forces, or the maintenance of national interest during the emergency.'"

The War Department tonight authorized the following from the Provost Marshal General:

"The Provost Marshal General's Office urges upon all employers of labor throughout the United States to allow their men sufficient time off Thursday, Sept. 12, in which to register. While the registration booths everywhere will be open from 7 A. M. until 9 P. M. registration day, it is desirable not to have the bulk of the work of the registrars crowded into the closing hours of the day."

Mrs. Britely Says:

"You may rest assured that you will enjoy the satisfying completeness and the delicious harmony of high quality foods afforded by a Shanley Luncheon. The more critical you are the keener will be your appreciation."

Monroe Clothes

As Our Marines Rout the Huns—

So MONROE CLOTHES ROUT HIGH PRICES

Monroe Clothes in addition to being America's "best seller" are also the New York clothing market "stabilizer."

When other merchants see the real values we offer for Fall at $17, $21, $25 and $30—they think twice before "marking up" prices and taking advantage of present day high woolen costs.

Our immense volume of business (the largest in America) made it necessary for us to prepare away ahead for this Fall's clothing needs—as a result we own our woolens away under present market prices—and this fact coupled with our existing economies of operating

—direct from maker to you
—in low rent Upstairs Shops

—enables us to sell Monroe Clothes for Fall at less than today's wholesale replacement price.

ANOTHER BOY PLAY BY STUART WALKER

"Jonathan Makes a Wish" Tells the Hopes and the Pains of Fourteen.

A NEW PORTMANTEAU PIECE

Gregory Kelly, George Gaul, and Edgar Stehli Lead an Able Cast.

JONATHAN MAKES A WISH, a comedy in three acts by Stuart Walker. At the Princess.

Aunt Letitia	Elizabeth Patterson
Susan Sample	Beatrice Maude
Uncle Nathaniel	George Gaul
Uncle John	Ainsworth Arnold
Jonathan	Gregory Kelly
Mlle. Ferrault	Margaret Mower
Hank	Edgar Stehli
Albert Peet	Joseph Graham
Mary	Elizabeth Black
John III	John Talbott

Stuart Walker has abandoned the "portmanteau" setting with which his theatre became known among us, but he has kept to the portmanteau style in writing plays. "Jonathan Makes a Wish" is slight in theme, fanciful in treatment, and touched throughout by a freshness of artistic feeling as gentle and unaffected as it is resolute. For the public which requires that the offering of an evening shall be what it calls "a play," the new piece at the Princess will appear a rather baffling trifle, but it may safely be recommended to the surprisingly large number of those who enjoyed the previous contents of the Portmanteau.

Jonathan is a boy of 14 who writes plays and songs and wants to grow up to be a man of the theatre. He is played by Gregory Kelly, who created the young hero of "Seventeen," and very well played indeed; but in addition to shucking off three years Mr. Kelly has to do without the points of satiric comedy which made Mr. Tarkington's hero so popularly delightful. Jonathan not only takes himself very seriously, but is taken very seriously by his creator. One somehow imagines that Mr. Walker wrote retrospectively and autobiographically, giving us as it were the youthful epic of Portmanteau theatrics.

Our hero stands between two influences. One uncle, the present Head of the Family, wants him to grow up as the future Head of the Family and manufacture concrete drainpipes. The other, who has himself run away from home in youth, wants him to declare independence of drainpipes, even if he also has to run away. At this juncture a tramp appears, and a whistled air on his lips, and in his heart the humor and poetry of the open road.

Jonathan makes a break for liberty, but only succeeds in fracturing his skull—or spine, or something. The second act shows the resulting delirium in which, imagining himself a hunchback tramp, he "builds a fear" of failure. In the third act he is well again, and, after a stormy council of the family, "makes a wish" and goes out to the theatrical metropolis with his artistic uncle.

There is nothing particularly new in the theme. Even the intermezzo of the second recalls the dream scenes of "The Poor Little Rich Girl." But the treatment is fresh and authentic, and therefore interesting.

The artistic uncle was admirably played by George Gaul, the Genesis of "Seventeen," and the Job of Mr. Walker's Biblical matinées last year. An astonishingly able and versatile actor, this. As a whole, in fact, Mr. Walker's company is admirable. Edgar Stehli, hitherto unknown here, played the part of a tramp with that rarest of all things, a blending of fun and lyric fancy.

'OVER HERE' LACKS REALITY.

Oliver D. Bailey's Melodrama Is Childishly Simple in Its Logic.

It is far from a bad idea which Oliver D. Bailey has used as the basis of "Over Here," but he has built around it a play of such singular childishness that it was difficult at times at the Bijou Tuesday night to believe that one was really witnessing a performance in a metropolitan playhouse. The audience, at first doubtful, made up its mind definitely in the third act to accept the piece as farce, and it was as such that it finished the evening. The evidence, unfortunately, indicated that Mr. Bailey was attempting a melodrama.

The play deals with a pair of youths whom the war has failed to stir to the enlisting point, and of the elaborate plan hatched by their familiar to arouse their fighting blood. The first two acts are melodrama of the wildest sort, but melodrama palliated by the fact that it is strictly home-brewed. The conversion of the youths follows, of course, as a dramatic necessity, although their surrender to the rather shallow scheme of Mr. Bailey's plotters was no particular tribute to their intelligence.

The audience is made a party to the plot early in the third act, but to keep the play going it is necessary to continue to withhold the secret from the boys, although they have long since become militant. This is the play's greatest technical defect. The third act veers from melodrama to plain foolishness, being taken up largely with the conversion by farcical methods of the pacifist mother of one of the boys.

TAXES AND LOANS.

Money obtained by the Government for the Fourth Liberty Loan must come in the main from three sources: from large accumulations in the hands of private individuals and institutions controlling funds for investment; from the profits of industry and of trade, and from the very numerous class of small investors, wage earners, and others who pay for bonds out of their savings.

There is grave reason to fear that the War Revenue Bill, as it was reported to the House by the Ways and Means Committee, will in large measure remove the second class from the list of possible subscribers to the Fourth Liberty Loan. It is of public knowledge that the great industrial and mercantile concerns of the country subscribed heavily to the first three loans. The aggregate of subscriptions from this class amounted to billions. But Mr. KITCHIN'S War Revenue Bill imposes very high taxes upon profits. Under the war profits section 80 per cent. of gains over and above the average pre-war period will be taken by the Government. Under the sliding scale classifications of the excess profits tax, which is the alternative to the other, the impost ranges from 35 per cent. to 70 per cent. of the gains above the allowed percentage on capital. Complaint will not be made of the burden of these heavy imposts; the President has pledged "all our resources" to the winning of the war, and the payers of taxes will willingly contribute to that all-important end. The question that arises concerns not the amount of the tax, but the wisdom of Congress in taking by taxation so very large a part of the fund out of which money must come for the purchase of Liberty Bonds. The campaign for the Fourth Liberty Loan opens in two weeks. It is the hope of the Federal Government that the subscription may be closed, successfully, after a short but vigorous campaign. The country will respond generously and with patriotism, but it can respond only in proportion to the means and the credit of subscribers.

Out of war profits, or "excess" profits, payments to a vast aggregate were made for bonds of the former issues. But if a good deal more than half of the profits of industry and the gains of trade over the average of pre-war period are taken in taxes, how much will remain for bond subscriptions? Active business concerns, large and small, pay out only a part of their profits in dividends; much of their money is used as capital in the enterprise, in renewals and extensions, in paying off obligations. A good deal of capital is habitually used in "carrying" stock manufactured for sale in a later season, or in taking advantage of a favorable market to purchase supplies and raw materials. So large a deduction from corporate earnings will naturally force a resort to the use of credit, to borrowing from banks money to be used in the business. What margin will be left for investment in Liberty Bonds is a matter of conjecture, but it must be very much smaller than the enormous aggregate available for purchasing bonds of the prior issues. That is the risk Congress takes in levying 80 per cent. taxes upon profits, and it is a grave risk.

The bill makes the proportion of tax revenue to bond revenue greater than any of the other Allied Governments has ventured to propose. Out of $24,000,000,000, the estimated amount required for the year's war expenses, Mr. KITCHIN'S bill would raise $8,000,000,000 by taxes, or 33 1-3 per cent. Mr. FORDNEY ventures the prediction that the bill as reported will raise more than $1,000,000,000 above the yield estimated by the Committee on Ways and Means, that is, $9,000,000,000 instead of $8,000,000,000. It is his opinion that the pending bill will raise 45 per cent. of the Government's war expenditures for the year. This figure is reached, evidently, by omitting from the amount of war expenditures the year's total of loans to our Allies. In time of war it is a sound policy to raise as much revenue as possible from taxes; that reduces the interest charge and the amount of indebtedness to be paid out of taxes after the war is over; it shortens the period of financial recuperation. But there is an obvious limit, and that limit is over-passed when so much money is taken by taxation that not enough is left for floating Government loans. In general, a ratio of 25 per cent. is held to approximate the line of safety. At 33 per cent. that line is passed, at 45 per cent. it is lost sight of altogether.

The foundation mistake of the makers of the bill was their attempt to assess taxes upon the smallest possible number of persons and businesses, leaving the great majority of the people free from any levy, direct or indirect. This policy was plainly dictated by politics, the desire to leave the mass of voters free from grounds of complaint against the party in power. Politics and finance are a bad mixture. A more general distribution of the burden would have been just, since all the people will enjoy the benefits of victory, and in that way any dangerous diminution of the funds available for bond purchases would have been avoided.

MAINE.

In 1916, when Mr. HUGHES carried Maine by only a little more than 5,000 votes, Mr. HALE, the Republican candidate for Senator, beat the Democratic nominee by more than 10,000 votes. There was a bitter and personal campaign against Mr. HALE, and in his own party considerable opposition. Mr. FERNALD, Republican candidate for the short term in the Senate, defeated his Democratic competitor by more than 13,000 votes. This year Mr. FERNALD, candidate for the long term, wins by something over 12,000 votes. Comparing a dull with a "Presidential" year, Mr. FERNALD'S and the Republican victory seems indisputable.

The Maine Republicans have made gains in both branches of the Legislature. The reduced vote for Governor MILLIKEN is a trifling result of the perennial Dirigo quarrels about the degree to which enforcement of the prohibition law shall reach, about the amount of austerity that should prevail at Old Orchard Beach, the faint Puritan adumbration of Coney Island, and so on. The four Maine Republican Representatives in Congress are re-elected by increased majorities, except in one instance, where former Representative MCGILLICUDDY, a forcible and popular man, seems to have enlarged his 1916 vote.

Win the war! Support the President! These were the national issues on which Senator FERNALD and the four Representatives in Congress were re-elected. Their record is clear. Their patriotism is undoubted. Their victory is not Republican, but national, American. Is it men like KITCHIN, DENT, CHAMP CLARK, who flop up from time to time to oppose great, imperative national measures, that have to rely upon Republican support—is it half-hearted and mutinous Democrats in Congress who are supporting Mr. WILSON and the war best?

So far as candidates for Federal place are concerned, the Maine election is a victory for Mr. WILSON and the war. It is not a Republican or a Democratic war. It is an American war. The men who have held up the President's hands, no matter what their party names, deserve to be returned to Congress. A lot of Democrats in Congress, Laodiceans or pacifists, might well be spared. From his political enemies Mr. WILSON not infrequently gets judicious criticism and indispensable help.

CODDLING GERMANY'S ALLIES.

Suppose the United States had declared war against Crown Prince FREDERICK WILLIAM'S army, but not against Crown Prince RUPPRECHT'S army. That situation would not be very creditable to our intelligence and foresight, would it? We have not done just that; but we have declared war against a portion of the German Army and have not declared it against another portion. We have declared war against those parts of the German Army which operate in France, Belgium, Russia, and Italy, and have not declared it against those parts which operate in Mesopotamia, Palestine, Macedonia, and Serbia. That is not what we call it; we call it declaring war against Germany and Austria and not declaring war against Turkey and Bulgaria, but the meaning is the same, since the forces of Turkey and Bulgaria are merely parts of the German Army and all their operations, military and diplomatic, are directed from Potsdam.

Germany, Austria, Turkey, and Bulgaria, have been mobilized into one huge army, of which the German Emperor is the Commander in Chief. The whole civil resources as well as the whole military establishment of those four countries belong to that army. For the purposes of this war Turkey is as much a part of the German Empire—of the German Army—as Bavaria. For a long time we were fed with delusions to the effect that Austria was willing to be coaxed into a separate peace, and therefore we did not declare war against Austria. Finally we discovered that Austria was amusing herself with us, that she was actually a mere department of the German Empire so far as the war is concerned, and we indignantly declared war against her. But we are still under the delusion that Turkey and Bulgaria can be coaxed into a separate peace, and so we delay declaring war against them, to the great profit of our German enemy.

It is, of course, conceivable that Turkey and Bulgaria might, in some circumstances, break away from Germany and Austria and sue for peace. But they will never do it so long as we pursue our present course toward them. For the Germans are making use of it to strengthen the war feeling in those two countries. It is conceivable that Turkey and Bulgaria, especially Turkey, might begin to feel alarmed at the prospect of being isolated after the war, of having no friends. But the German agent immediately points to the United States, and says to them, "Isolated? No "friends? You won't be isolated, no "matter what happens to poor Ger"many. See, the United States is still "your friend. So brace up and go on "with the war." And that is, in fact, the very form which the German propaganda is taking in Turkey and Bulgaria.

This delay of ours in declaring war against the southern wing of the German Army works also to our injury in another way. It gives a free rein to Bulgarian propaganda in the United States, and Germany in her busiest days never had a busier lot of propagandists working for her in this country than Bulgaria has here today. It works to our confusion in another way; for though we may dodge or delay the issue, some time the question is certain to come up whether we are to stand by Serbia and Rumania or betray them to Bulgaria; and Bulgaria's war aims are inconsistent with anything short of the mutilation of those nations. Are we for Serbia and Rumania or are we against them? We are against them if we are not against Bulgaria.

A "CONFIDENCE MAN."

It is delightful to see Count CZERNIN, who succeeded and was succeeded by Baron BURIAN as Austro-Hungarian Minister of Foreign Affairs, fall upon the neck of a League of Nations. "An overwhelming majority "of the German people, with their "Emperor at their head, honestly de"sire a lasting peace." "Honestly" is good, and it is good to find the Count setting the Central Powers at work on "the fundamental principles of this new world order." He must have been reading the "Pollio" Eclogue lately.

This is the gentleman whose pretended velleities for peace, deep love for the gulling program of "no annexations, no indemnities," (Austria-Hungary annexing meanwhile,) were so exploited. To keep up the comedy, the German press attacked him.

The New Europe published the other day a speech delivered on July 18 in the Herrenhaus by Count CZERNIN, once hailed as the herald of "a break with Germany." He belongs to the Bohemian feudal nobility, and the pacifists have loved to regard him as a Czech.

He spoke of "us Germans of the Herrenhaus." He said that "in Aus"tria government against the Ger"mans is a political and parliamen"tary impossibility." Innocents who believe in Austro-Hungarian "Federalism," in intrusting the oppressed nationalities made "autonomous" to the tender mercies of the Magyars and the Germans, should chew that confession long. He patted the Brest-Litovsk and Ukraine treaties on the back. In full confession, he admitted that, "in our foreign policy, "thank GOD! we are steering the "German course."

He is steering it now, out of office, as he did in office. His League of Nations patter will dupe nobody. In vain is the net spread in sight of the bird. German "confidence men" in Austria-Hungary are as much trusted by the Allies as the principals in Germany.

NO FAMINE IN GERMANY.

One of the first duties of IRA NELSON MORRIS, the American Minister to Sweden, now on leave in this country, has been to knock on the head the persistent delusion that starvation is driving the German people toward revolution. Their real economic condition is as well known in Stockholm as anywhere. Germany has had many partisans in Sweden, especially in the army and in the industries that have profited during the war as never before. Stockholm became a clearing house for information about Germany. Any one who took the trouble to inquire, and could sift the wheat from the chaff, might learn what real economic conditions in that country were.

The American Minister, of course, had access to the official sources. In a signed statement approved by the State Department Mr. MORRIS deals with the stories about the extremity of the German people which have taken up so much space in American newspapers. Their circulation began as long ago as the first year of the war, when the British blockade was supposed to be effective. As time went on we in America wondered how the Germans could exist on the crumbs of food doled out to them. The war was to be won not on the battlefield, but in homes where the cupboard was bare. There were going to be bread riots, the people would rise, cast out the military oligarchy, and make an end of the war. Details of suffering and emaciation were given in so many narrative forms—even refugees who had got out of the country were quoted—that there seemed to be only one answer to the question, Can Germany last much longer? Our Minister to Sweden, weighing his words, dispels the delusion:

> There is no doubt that in many parts of Germany there is a marked scarcity of food and that the civilian population has been reduced to the minimum ration, but it still receives sufficient for existence. Conditions are better in the rural districts, particularly as regards the farmers and landowners, even in the northern part of Germany, where the scarcity is most felt. In the southern part conditions improve still more, and resorts and hotels there still serve meals at moderate prices.

Mr. MORRIS reports that in the manufacturing districts in Poland, where there is congestion of population, there is less food than elsewhere, but he adds: "It is a mistake to believe "that this has produced a strong cur"rent toward revolution or any gen"eral lessening of the loyalty of the "people." On the contrary, they still believe in the invincibility of their armies. But the truth will not prevent the Government from launching a peace offensive during the Winter and playing upon the sympathies of the American people by showing how famine conditions are destroying a great nation which wants nothing so much as the honorable conclusion of a war from which it has suffered most.

Anticipating this, what does our Minister to Sweden say? He is not without bowels of compassion, but he knows the German military party. "The country should realize," he says, "that its entire energy must be "put into the struggle, and must not "be relaxed for a single instant. "There is no doubt of victory so long "as these moves by Germany are "plainly understood." There can be no peace until the German military party is defeated, and it cannot be defeated except in the field. There is other testimony to the point that a revolutionary spirit does not exist in Germany. The people are loyal to the Government and they have faith in their army. But the Government and the military party are one and the same. Until it is beaten decisively in the field there will be no peace.

PSYCHOLOGY OF THE WAR SHOW.

To the thoughtful citizen who has seen the musical performance "Yip, Yip, Yaphank" by the men from Camp Upton, and is later selected for military service, it suggests a philosophy that will enable him to accept the hardships of service in the spirit that makes for a minimum of nervous wear and tear and a maximum of the cheerful, willing, helpful point of view so necessary in the good soldier. It accomplishes by suggestion what enforced discipline does not do, namely, creates the state of mind which makes light of the unpleasant in the military novitiate and establishes a sure foundation for training.

To the parents who see the performance comes a feeling that the soldier's life is after all a happy one; that it molds character; that their son while undergoing the rigors of the camp will be contented. This belief makes their fears for him the less and their hopes for him the greater.

For the soldier in the making there is set up a picture which inspires loyalty and attracts admiration. Impulsively he aspires to be like the type portrayed. He experiments, perhaps, with his next disagreeable experience by efforts to maintain cheerfulness, finds the experience less disagreeable, and, presto! has learned the lesson, to endure hardship with the least discomfort. Not only this, by suggestion he comes to believe that the American soldier should always appear cheerful, no matter what happens, and it becomes a matter of pride with him to conduct himself accordingly in any emergency or under the most trying conditions. This performance teaches by the gentle and subtle art of suggestion what sterner means might fail to teach.

To the public "Yip, Yip, Yaphank" is to be recommended because, aside from its salutary lesson and the example it sets, the proceeds are to be devoted to the building of community houses at Camp Upton, where the families and friends of soldiers may visit them, to cheer and sustain and to be strengthened and inspired in turn, also to say farewell before the boys go overseas. If there should be a surplus over this worthy need, the money will be used, under the direction of the War Department, by those who are charged with providing recreation for soldiers in the camps.

The World seems to think it an inconsistency in the Bolsheviki that they, "after 'abolishing the death "penalty,' have outdone historic rec"ord in murdering." It does the Bolsheviki an injustice. In abolishing the death penalty they did not mean to show any fondness for human life; they wanted to render the taking of it easy. They did not object to murder, but to the penalty for murder. The objection to capital punishment among Russian radicals is not that it takes human life, but that it takes it under the forms of law. Individual killing is held in high respect; it is the punishment for that kind of killing that is objected to, and it is objected to because it is a punishment.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Removing a Cause of Discontent.

Hardly less trying to the tempers of our soldiers at home and abroad than the delays and losses to which their letters have been subjected has been the irregularity with which they have received their pay. Time and again they have been left for weeks, and not infrequently for months, without a cent in their pockets, and as this is a state of affairs to which men of the sort that form our armies are utterly unaccustomed they have found it particularly humiliating and painful.

Their consequent discontent has not been lessened by the knowledge they all had that, whatever else their Government may have lacked as a result of its unpreparedness for participation in a great war, it was abundantly supplied with money. Had this not been the case—that is, if they had not been paid because our public treasury, like not a few others in these days, was entirely or almost without real money to give them—they would have endured pennilessness as uncomplainingly as they have the many other inevitable hardships of war. They were well aware, however, that the cause of this trouble was simply the inability, or rather the failure, of the military dispensing bureau so to readjust its methods as to meet the new conditions created by the expansion of the service to a size many times greater than before.

At last, according to an official report from Washington, the problem of paying the soldiers on time has been taken up by somebody who realized that its difficulties did not constitute even a poor excuse for not solving it. And of course, so taken up, the solution has been found. At any rate, that is the confident promise, and, as described, the new plan seems to be a simple one—so simple that the wonder is that it took a year and a half to think it up. Perhaps a large part of that time was spent in coming to an appreciation of the fact that a system that had worked well for many years with a little army would not work as well with armies of millions, operating 3,000 miles from home and constantly on the move.

Next, it is safe to assume, the closely related problem of distributing promptly the allotments to dependents of the soldiers will be attacked in the same way, and no doubt that one, too, will be vanquished with equal success.

Texas Still Somewhat Unregenerate.

It grieves The Houston Post—as well it might—that in the last two years there have been 1,123 homicides in the State of Texas, and that the biennial report of the State's Attorney General, from which these figures are taken, also shows that in the same time there have been only 650 trials for murder. These trials have resulted in 442 convictions and 208 acquittals, but the number of death sentences executed was the strangely small one of 17, though capital punishment for murder is still supposed to exist in Texas and there are just enough impositions of it to warrant the supposition.

Of the seventeen convicts who paid the death penalty for murder, The Post says, "Few of these would have been executed if they had not been black." If that be so, The Post seems to be justified in declaring that in Texas "men murder because there is no great risk in it," and also to be not without excuse for asserting that democracy, with its claim to protect the citizen in his life, liberty, and pursuit of happiness, is not endangered in Europe and by the Prussian autocracy alone.

These statistics will cause not a little surprise here in the North, for we have made such a thorough revision of old ideas as to manners, methods, and morals in Texas—we had heard so often about its victories over rum, gambling, and pistol toting—that to learn that man-killing is still frequent and often unpunished there gives a good deal of a shock.

With a caution in the circumstances easily understandable, The Post takes care to state that it makes its critical comments on the prevalence and immunity of homicide in Texas, not because conditions there are worse than they are in other parts of the country, but simply because it happens to have at hand the figures for Texas and hasn't them for some other States where murder is still more frequent and just as safe.

He Made a Large Admission.

A decidedly astonishing confession was made in Berlin this week in a public lecture delivered by General VON FREYTAG-LORINGHOVEN, Deputy Chief of the General Staff, and therefore a man who speaks with some authority. He was attempting an explanation of the recent German reverses on the western front, and, in the course of it, he said that "the position we occupied before the enemy counteroffensive began was the result of an abortive offensive, and therefore unsuitable for a defense whose aim was the effective economizing of forces."

So the great rush that began on March 21, in spite of the many square miles of ground it gained and the long retreats it enforced on both the British and the French, was an "abortive offensive"! In other words, the plans of that wonderful staff of supermen were based on a misunderstanding of the conditions in which the great attack was made, and it was a failure from the German point of view as well as that of the Allies.

This admission must have been a particularly humiliating one for General VON FREYTAG-LORINGHOVEN to make, and the responsibilities for such a mistake are extremely heavy. In other armies they are followed, almost invariably, by the retirement of commanders in chief and a long line of their closer subordinates. It has been perfectly obvious, however, to all the world outside of Germany that the offensive was "abortive"—that it did not accomplish its purpose, which was to separate the British and French Armies and to take either Paris or the Channel ports or both. Its enormous losses were suffered without any compensating advantage. It is therefore no great credit to the much-vaunted German efficiency.

As to "Fighting Like Devils."

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The attention of newspaper reporters should be called to the gross impropriety of describing the fighting of our boys in France in terms of the infernal regions: "They fought like devils," &c.

Of course devils fight hard and furiously, but they always lose out in the end. The heavenly hosts also fight still harder and more furiously, with a righteous fury, and they beat the devil every time. It would be all right to describe the Germans as "fighting like hell," "fighting like the devil." That is the exact style of their performance. And they will surely go down in defeat. Our boys, whether they know it or not, are fighting "on the Lord's side" in this great war. So let us describe them as "fighting like heaven," "fighting like the heavenly hosts," "fighting like angels" or "archangels." It would sound better, and be a truer description of their style and spirit.

WILLIAMS ANSWERS MORGAN COMPLAINT

RENEWS HIGH RATE CHARGES

Asserts Proposed 9 3-4 Per Cent. Rate, with Federal Guarantee, Was Wholly Unjustifiable.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 10.—John Skelton Williams, Director of the Division of Finance of the United States Railroad Administration, tonight issued a reply to the statement of J. P. Morgan & Co. regarding the renewal of the Chicago & Western Indiana note issue which defaulted on Sept. 1. The statement was:

"Messrs. J. P. Morgan & Co. complain that the United States Railroad Administration did not publish in full its correspondence with them concerning the $15,000,000 Chicago & Western Indiana note issue placed a year ago by these bankers, and which defaulted Sept. 1. The portion of the correspondence which, for the sake of brevity, was omitted from the statement did not in any way affect the merits of the discussion or the correctness of the conclusions. The Railroad Administration cheerfully invites attention to the following telegrams addressed by this division to Messrs. Morgan & Co., which are the only unpublished communications sent them on this subject except a brief dispatch on Aug. 27 which urged the bankers to co-operate with the railroad companies owning the terminal company to avert default, and in which no reference was made to terms of renewal.

"Telegram sent J. P. Morgan & Co. Aug. 30:

> Referring further to my telegram to you of yesterday and to the circular letter which was published over the names of your firm, the First National Bank of New York, the National City Company, Messrs. Harris, Forbes & Company just one year ago. In that letter you reported that the properties of the terminal companies had recently been appraised at more than $128,000,000, and you pointed out that the total indebtedness secured thereon, including the $15,000,000 note issue, was less than $70,000,000. You also called attention to the obligations of certain railroad companies to pay rentals which it was believed would be sufficient to meet interest on the notes which you were offering.
> You have now been given assurance that during the period of Government control the United States Government will assure to the terminal company an income from rentals sufficient to enable it to meet six per cent. interest on this $15,000,000 note issue, as well as the interest on its mortgage bonds, taxes, and certain other charges under these conditions, if we assume that your assurance as to the real value of the property behind these obligations is even approximately correct and with the substituted guarantee of the United States for rentals previously chargeable to the railroad corporations. A default in this note issue would seem to be wholly unjustifiable in view of the responsibility and resources of its sponsors.
> I trust I may be pardoned for bringing forcibly to your attention these considerations, which it is believed should urge you to prompt and effective action. May I further suggest that the interest rate of approximately 10 per cent. per annum, including bankers' commissions, at which you suggest you may be able to effect the renewal of this note issue for one year, impresses the Director General as being very excessive, especially after we take into consideration that you and your associates have at this time and have had continuously on deposit many millions of dollars of railroad funds upon which, it is understood, you allow either no interest or only 2 or 3 per cent. per annum.
> Please show this telegram to the First National Bank of New York, the National City Company, and Messrs. Harris, Forbes & Co.

"Telegram sent J. P. Morgan & Co., on Aug. 31.

> May I ask if it is your view that Chicago & Western Indiana note holders will refuse to extend these notes for twelve months if they realize that the full interest at rate of 6 per cent. is insured to them during the period of Government control? Is it not reasonable to assume that obligations which have the security as to principal, which these notes were represented to have at the time they were placed a year ago, with the added advantage of insuring the interest assured during the period of Government control by the Federal Government, will find other ready purchasers, even though for any reason some of the present holders should be unwilling to agree to a twelve months' renewal?
> Pending the placing of the unrenewed notes with such investors, it is assumed that bankers making the original offering can readily provide the funds necessary for the redemption of notes whose holders may be unwilling to renew.
> Please show this telegram to your associates, the First National Bank, the National City Company, and Harris, Forbes & Co.

Telegram addressed to J. P. Morgan & Company under date of Sept. 1:

> Your telegram received at eleven o'clock Sunday, asking Director General to advance funds to pay the $15,000,000 Terminal Company notes placed by you a year ago, and maturing Sept. 1, with the understanding that you would, under certain conditions, make an offering of new notes later to raise funds for reimbursement, but without any committals on your part for return of funds which might be so advanced.
> Director General has in previous messages made clear his position, and does not feel justified in going further as proposed by you. Director General again expresses the hope that you as bankers and fiscal agents for Terminal Company, with your banking associates, First National Bank of New York, National City Company, and Harris, Forbes & Company, may find it desirable and expedient to advance Terminal Company, even if only temporarily, on the collateral of the bonds securing the maturing notes, the funds necessary to redeem them so as to avoid serious impairment of credit and default, making the $20,000,000 bonds held as collateral subject to sale forthwith. If the four banking houses should claim inability to provide the funds temporarily, which is of course most improbable, Director General will entertain request to advance $15,000,000 for not over sixty days at 6 per cent. per annum, on Terminal Company notes secured by present collateral, provided the bankers will agree to provide funds for remainder of twelve months at not over 6 per cent. per annum interest.

"The substance of all communications received from Messrs. Morgan & Co. on this subject up to the time the statement was given to the press on the evening of the 6th instant was fully covered in the Director General's published statement, except the following telegram from Messrs. Morgan & Co., which was in reply to the above-quoted telegram from this office on Sept. 2, which is unessential, although further confirmatory of the conclusions stated in the press statement:

> Your wire received at 4 o'clock today. We regret that it is impossible for us to reach our associates today, but speaking for ourselves we are not prepared to guarantee that the advance you suggest making could be repaid at the end of sixty days on the terms mentioned in your telegram. Our view is that conditions will not at that time make such an operation possible.

"The day after the statement was issued by this office a telegram was received from Messrs. Morgan & Co., dated the previous day, in which they proposed that if this office should desire them to do so they would submit a suggestion for renewal of the noteholders of 6 per cent. without commission to the bankers, but without any underwriting or guarantee whatsoever as to the placing of the loan.

"It is clear from the entire correspondence that the only offer from Messrs. Morgan & Co. prior to the publication of the correspondence called for a 2¾ per cent. commission to the bankers and their associates, which, with other interest charges, made a total of 9¾ per cent. on a loan which the bankers claimed provided a margin of security of about 100 per cent.—and with the Federal guarantee as to payment of interest during Government control. This the Railroad Administration and the borrowing company considered, under the circumstances, wholly unjustifiable, and well calculated to disturb and advance the interest rates for money, which it is particularly important at this time to keep within moderate limits."

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Sept. 10.—Directors of the Chicago & Western Indiana met today and accomplished little in meeting the default of their $15,000,000 note issue, aside from authorizing officials to continue negotiations with the hope of ending the differences between Morgan & Co. and Secretary McAdoo and arranging payment or extension.

STEFANSSON'S SHIP BACK.

The Polar Bear Reaches Nome After Trying Voyage in Arctic.

By Telegraph to the Editor of THE NEW YORK TIMES.

NOME, Alaska, Sept. 9.—The Canadian Geological Survey Ship Polar Bear, of Vilhjalmur Stefansson's expedition, commanded by John Robert Hadley, arrived here at noon today from Bear Island. All on board were well. One native named Pipsuk was drowned in the Bater Island River.

The Polar Bear, damaged by ice on May 31 when the Bater Island River overflowed its banks, causing the ice to jam. The Polar Bear was lifted out of the water by the ice and her keel was so badly damaged that she sank immediately. When the ice cleared away the vessel was raised and her keel was repaired and packed with what material could be found, making possible the start of the voyage for Nome.

All the records and specimens are in good condition and will be shipped from Nome on the steamship Victoria. A large number of specimens were collected, some of them after Stefansson left the ice party.

Thirteen men, consisting of nine whites and four natives, left Cross Island on March 15. Four of them in the first supporting party went out a hundred miles, returning on April 26, all in good condition. The second support party went out 150 miles on the ice. They left with two sleds drawn by sixteen dogs. The five men in the party were Storkelson, Massik, Gomar, Killian and Knight. They took with them provisions for two months.

The ice had a strong westward drift and Storkelson gave up the plan of going to Bank Island and camped on a strong ice floe which was drifting westward.

Castell left the ice party on April 14 and arrived at the Bater Island camp on May 22 with twenty dogs, one sled and all the men except five.

The ice conditions have been very bad all Summer. All the dogs have been disposed of except Hans, who will be disposed of according to previous orders given by Stefansson.

The Polar Bear left Bater Island on Aug. 15.

Representative of Stefansson.

EXTEND ANTHEM PROGRAM.

Exercises to Cover Three-Day Period at Schools and in the Park.

Because of the demand for participation in the exercises to familiarize every one with the words of "The Star-Spangled Banner," Henry MacDonald, Director General of the Mayor's Committee on National Defense, yesterday announced that the plans for New York have been broadened to include three days. Beginning Friday afternoon, children of the parochial schools in every borough will assemble in front of their schoolhouses to attend flag-raising ceremonies and sing the national anthem. Saturday afternoon children of the public schools will assemble in parks and playgrounds, and, under direction of play leaders, will take part in songs of the allied nations. This part of the program is under the direction of William J. Lee, Superintendent of Recreations of New York. According to Mr. Lee, plans are under way to repeat the Italian testimonial concert, which will be held on the Mall in Central Park tomorrow night, on Sunday night, in honor of Francis Scott Key, author of the national anthem.

Through the courtesy of music publishers, millions of copies of "The Star-Spangled Banner" are being printed for distribution during the three days' celebration. Arrangements were completed yesterday to send more than 100,000,000 copies of the song throughout the country through the medium of the Y. M. C. A., Knights of Columbus, and other war relief organizations. These copies are the gift of publishers. Miss Helen Fulton, Chairman of the sub-committee in charge of the work, yesterday sent an appeal for additional volunteer workers. The committee headquarters are in Room 905, Hall of Records.

NO HOLDUP OF ARMY WORK.

Clothing Strike Will Not Interfere, Union Head Says.

Sidney Hillman, General President of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, denied yesterday that in making a demand upon the American Men's and Boys' Clothing Manufacturers' Association for a reduction in working hours from 48 to 44 hours a week, the workers contemplated holding up the production of army uniforms now being turned out by the manufacturers. Leon Mann, Managing Director of the employers' organization, said in a statement given out on Monday that there were indications that the workers did not intend to take the army's pressing needs into consideration, but this was denied yesterday by Mr. Hillman, in behalf of the union.

"I would like to make it very plain," he said, "that the union, and the shops under its control whether in New York, Philadelphia, Chicago, or elsewhere, are under an agreement with Professor William Z. Ripley, Administrator of Labor Standards for Army Clothing, representing the War Department, not to stop work. The understanding is that such questions as arise concerning wages, hours, and general working conditions, will be laid before the Board of Standards for adjudication. We have laid our demand for an eight-hour day before the board, and do not intend to force the question by declaring a strike that would have the effect of tying up army contracts.

"The request for the 44-hour week, while directed to the manufacturers generally, would be particularly applicable to those manufacturers engaged in turning out children's clothing."

GHOSTS.

They rise before us now—ghosts from the past—
And mock our longings, our great patriot zeal!
What valiant spirit would not be downcast?
What earnest heart no sad repentance feel?

The wraith of youth—that youth we flung away
With eager haste, rushing, we knew not where,
How it would serve us in this war-filled day!
Would we had guarded, nourished it, with care!

The ghost of strength! How little then we cared
For splendid muscles, nerves no pain could rack!
We hurried on unheeding how health fared!
Oh, would today we had our vigor back!

The wraith of skill that once so well we knew!
The ghost of knowledge, ardor, competence!
Our dotard ways, how soon, how fast they grew
As you and I indulged our indolence!

They rise before us now, ghosts of the past,
As we sit helpless, listening to the fray,
And oh, their vengeance, as at last—at last—
We sense the service we have thrown away!

Now let our lips, long dumb, in warning cry,
Forget not, Youth, the coming day of strife,
Lest in that hour when strong men fight and die
You know their mock—the ghosts of wasted life!

CONSUMPTION TAX URGED IN DEBATE

PROFITS CLAUSE CRITICISED

Hull Favors McAdoo Plan—Predicts $4,000,000,000 Post-War Tax—General Debate Ends Tomorrow.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 10.—Criticism of features of the $8,000,000,000 revenue bill was continued by members of the Ways and Means Committee in the House today. Cordell Hull of Tennessee, author of the income tax law, and one of the influential members of the committee, mildly objected to the sections dealing with war profits, and deprecated the failure of the majority to write a differential on earned and unearned incomes.

Mr. Hull agreed with Secretary McAdoo that the war profits section should have, as an alternative tax, a less rigorous excess profits tax system, that the corporation income taxes should be at a straight rate rather than a differential, wherein 18 per cent. is assessed against undivided profits, and 12 per cent. against divided ones. As a Democratic leader of the House Committee, and one of its strongest members, Mr. Hull laid the basis for argument for changes by the Democratic members of the Senate Finance Committee now considering the bill.

Representative Nicholas Longworth, Republican, asserted that with this bill the country had almost "reached the limit of taxation and further taxes would approach confiscation of wealth." As an original advocate of a differential surtax on earned and unearned incomes Mr. Longworth said he regretted the committee had not seen fit to tax the earned incomes lower than unearned ones derived from rentals and bond coupons. Mr. Longworth estimated that the loss—directly and indirectly—of taxes on beverages would mean a loss to the Federal Government of $2,000,000,000 and many millions more to states and cities.

"The problem of raising this extra $2,000,000,000, involving as it does, immense taxes that will have to be imposed on the necessaries of life," said Mr. Longworth, "is one that we must face, and its solution will demand the best statesmanship in the country."

Both Longworth and Hull advocated a customs tax on breakfast table necessities as a means of raising revenue.

"I am gratified to see a so-called war profits provision go into the bill," said Mr. Hull. "From the beginning of the war I have exerted my humble efforts to this end upon the theory that, if it was intended to raise $8,000,000,000 the fullest and most accurate measure and at the same time avoid many inequities which would arise under a so-called excess profits provision, a war profits measure should be enacted in the very beginning. I readily agree, as every one must, that neither of these tax methods is a scientific, equitable method in the ordinary sense. Greater latitude should be allowed in exceptional cases of industries which suffered an abnormal depression during the three-year pre-war period in order that the normal profits of a representative concern may be taken as a basis.

"I still regret that the method of collection at the source was abandoned before it was given a reasonable and fair test. My opinion still is that, all in all, this method of collection would sweep cleaner, involve less expense to the Treasury and no greater inconvenience to the taxpayer than a so-called information at the source. This is especially true as to income from intangible or concealed property.

"Another income tax problem not yet satisfactorily solved relates to taxation of profits from sale of property purchased many years prior to and not in line of business. Many income tax laws do not undertake to reach profits other than those derived from a trade or business. In view of the tremendous number of collateral transactions in this country, however, it has been deemed important to develop along the most practical and workable lines this phase of income taxation. I think some additional legislation, both necessary and possible, should be had in this respect.

EDMOND F. BONAVENTURE.

Oldtime Dealer in Rare Books Drops Dead in His Home.

Edmond F. Bonaventure, 74 years old, dealer in rare books, dropped dead yesterday at his home, 318 West 106th Street, from heart disease. He had been an invalid for several years.

Mr. Bonaventure was born in Alsace June 28, 1844, and was educated at the School of Engineers at Chalons. He served in the Franco-Prussian War, being a member of the 14th Artillery, soon becoming Marechal des Logis-Chef. When Germany, after the war, annexed his country he refused to recognize any other flag than that of France, and came to America in 1871. He began practice as a civil and mechanical engineer at 71 Broadway, and until the panic of 1873 he was successful. Everything he had was swept away then, and he was obliged to part with many of his fine collection of rare books. This led to the establishment by him of a book store about 1878 under the Astor House in Barclay Street. He made periodical trips to Europe and imported rare books from Paris. The late J. P. Morgan and Robert Hoe were among his patrons.

ASHER WERTHEIMER DEAD.

Prominent London Art Dealer Who Was Rival of His Brother.

News has been received here of the death on Aug. 9, in Cravenhurst, Eastbourne, England, of Asher Wertheimer, prominent London art dealer. He was 74 years old, and was educated in London and Paris, becoming at an early age associated with his father and brother in their Bond Street art galleries. After the death of the father, the two brothers separated, Asher Wertheimer retaining the Bond Street galleries. Both were conspicuous figures at the art auctions at Christie's, and occasionally rivals.

What is said to have been his greatest deal was the purchase, in July, 1838, of the historic Dutch and Flemish collection formed in the early part of the last century by the Hope family.

Mr. Wertheimer was considered one of the best judges of art in England. He announced in 1916 his intention of bequeathing to the nation his gallery of family portraits by J. S. Sargent.

Mrs. Marion Esther Isaacs.

Mrs. Marion Esther Isaacs, widow of William M. Isaacs of 29 East Sixty-ninth Street, died Saturday at her Summer home in Brookline, Mass., in her 83d year. Mrs. Isaacs was a member of the Colonial Dames, the Daughters of the American Revolution, Society of Patriotic Women of America, and Colonial Governors. She was a director in the women's law class in the New York University, President of the New York Branch of the Baptist Home Mission Society for seventeen years; Honorary President of the Baptist Home for Aged; Vice President of the Woman's Sabbath Alliance, and a member for sixty years of Calvary Baptist Church.

Shall We Censor Fiction to Hide the Truth?

Rupert Hughes' New Novel

"The Unpardonable Sin"

From The New York Times Sept. 3d.

Censorship at Its Very Worst.

A very recent inquirer at one of the New York libraries for "The Unpardonable Sin," by RUPERT HUGHES, was told, rather scornfully and rather haughtily, that it was not the intention to have the book there or to assist in its circulation. No explanation of the refusal was made, but it would be both interesting and profitable to have one, and it might well be obtained by the Federal authorities. For, of the innumerable books that the war has produced, not half a dozen, if as many, that would be catalogued as fiction better deserve reading by good Americans of every age and both sexes than does "The Unpardonable Sin," and none better rewards a careful perusal.

Many parts of the book, indeed, will be found highly objectionable by pro-Germans and by pacifists, and there are, perhaps, a few people outside of those two closely related classes who, in this instance as in so many others, think ignorance is innocence and hope to abolish painful or terrible facts by ignoring them. It is true that Captain HUGHES tells plainly, but always decently, of certain abominable crimes committed by the Germans in Belgium. He doesn't tell all of those crimes, or the worst of them, because the revelation of some of them is possible only in official reports and technical treatises on psychopathology. He exercises a wise discretion and keeps well within the limits of the permissible, the commendable, and the essential—the essential because only by telling what he tells, and only by telling it as well as he tells it, can the American public be forced clearly to realize just why the United States and allies have sternly determined, cost what it may, to fight this war with Germany to a real finish.

A statement made by Captain HUGHES as of fact there is the warrant of sworn testimony, with names, dates, and places, in the reports of the Bryce Commission and of the French and Belgian Governments. He has exaggerated nothing and set down nothing in malice. And it is this book that a New York library sees fit to banish from its shelves! Why? Who rejects the theory of disloyalty—and to protect the enemy from deserved obloquy is a form of treason—must resort to the alternative explanation, hardly more charitable, of a silly and vicious prudery. Anyhow, such a censorship of the public's reading matter by library officials is nothing less than intolerable.

From The New York Times Sept. 4th.

Not a Public Library Ban.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In today's issue of THE TIMES there is an article under the title, "Censorship at Its Very Worst," in which it is stated that "a very recent inquirer at one of the New York libraries for 'The Unpardonable Sin,' by Rupert Hughes, was told, rather scornfully and rather haughtily, that it was not the intention to have the book there or to assist in its circulation." It is not stated at what library this happened; and I fear some of your readers may be led to conclude that it was at some branch of the New York Public Library.

The book referred to was approved for purchase for the branches of the New York Public Library some time ago. In due course copies will go to every one of the branch libraries in Manhattan, the Bronx, and Richmond—the only libraries under the control of the New York Public Library. We cannot promise fully to meet the demand for the book, because our book funds are inadequate.

If the incident described by "Inquirer" occurred at a branch of the New York Public Library we shall be grateful to him if he will write us at once, giving the name of the branch and information that will enable us to identify the assistant who made such a statement as he describes. It goes without saying that branch library assistants do not decide questions of this sort.

E. H. ANDERSON,
Director New York Public Library.

VAUGHN MOWS DOWN RED SOX AND CUBS CAPTURE FIFTH GAME OF WORLD'S SERIES HANDILY

CUBS TAKE FIFTH GAME OF SERIES BY 3 TO 0 SCORE

Vaughn, in Third Attempt, Baffles and Blanks Boston Batters with Ease.

PLAYERS HOLD UP CONTEST

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Sept. 10.—Hippo Jim Vaughn, twice pounded to humiliation by the brawn behind the Boston bats, pitched a masterly game of vindication against the Red Sox in the fifth contest of the world's series this afternoon, turning back the ever-impending onslaught of the Hub Red Legs by a 3 to 0 score. The huge southpaw threw the ball with an easy, graceful swing of his portside arm, which failed to impress the Boston hitters with the tremendous speed and power behind it. He held the Red Sox batting enthusiasm to five scattered hits.

Boston's dark horse entry, Sam Jones, failed to stop the rejuvenation of Chicago's batsmen, and they merrily thumped their hits out in effective groups. The fielding honors, which have remained with Manager Barrow's players, were snatched from them by the Cubs, and they supported Vaughn with an air-tight defense, stopping the Boston attack in the making.

Chicago's victory stretches the series out over tomorrow afternoon anyway, and if the Cubs should meet the Sox tomorrow with the same kind of grit and aggressiveness that marked their playing today, the series may have to be decided with a seventh game.

Players' Strike Holds Up Game.

The game was an hour late in getting under way, and up to the last minute it looked as if there would be no contest. The players of both clubs went on a strike because the National Commission refused to guarantee the prize money provided for under the new agreement which gives $2,000 to players of the winning club and $1,400 to those of the losing club.

The players were willing to compromise at $1,500 and $1,000, but the receipts of the first four games, in which the players share, leaves only $890 for the winning players and $535 for the losers. The remaining money of the players' pool is to be distributed among the members of the clubs finishing second, third, and fourth in the pennant races of each major league.

Great volumes of oratory were spilled by Comrade Harry Hooper, the official spokesman of the players, whose argument was that the other clubs should forfeit their share to give the contestants in the series their full shares. During the flurry of speechmaking, there entered into the picture none other than Honey Boy Fitz, the former Mayor of Boston, who pleaded for conciliation. The whole upshot of the strike was the silencing of all the walking delegates and the promise of the players to go through with the game.

The two leagues will take up the differences after the series and try to reach a settlement. Mann and Killifer of the Cubs and Hooper and Scott of the Red Sox offered to give up their share of the spoils to some war charity if the National Commission, the clubs, and the other players would do likewise. There has been no evidence of the spirit of these players becoming general.

Mann Adds Grand Climax.

In the last of the ninth Miller was sent in as a pinch hitter for Sam Jones. Miller caught hold of one of Vaughn's curves and hammered it violently toward the left field fence. Just in front of the fence is a short, abrupt embankment, and up this hill climbed Mann as the ball sped toward him. Only the fence blocked his path, and when he collided with the boards he sat down rudely on the bank. He turned his head and hands just in time to caress the truant ball while seated comfortably on the embankment.

Twice during heated moments of the game the Cub infield stole all the thunder of their opponents by squelching impending rallies with lightning fast double plays, scientifically executed by Hollocher, Pick, and Merkle.

There wasn't as much snap and ginger in the work of the Red Sox today, which gives the Chicago partisans the hope that at last the persistent stubbornness of the Cubs has borne fruit and slowed up the terrific gait at which the Sox were traveling.

Crowd Uneasy at Delay.

For a couple of hours before the game the big gathering sat in the stands and when time for play approached the crowd was getting uneasy. Patrolmen and mounted police quietly stationed themselves around the field in front of the huge stand ready for any demonstration which might follow in the event of the players refusing to play.

This only thing that prevented the crowd from breaking loose in their impatience was the band, which kept up a machine gun fire of lively tunes, while the oratorical ballplayers were discussing greed and avarice with the body which President Harry Frazee of the Red Sox had dubbed the National Omission.

There was a wild demonstration by the crowd when the wounded soldiers and sailors were helped to their seats. Most of them were on crutches and bandaged and some one started three vociferous cheers for them which brought a smiling light into their eyes

Hippo Vaughn's display of twirling skill brought forth rounds of applause from the partisan Boston spectators. As inning after inning went by and Vaughn's curves quieted the fury of the Boston cudgels, he was greeted with cheers as he walked to the bench. Toward the end of the game, when it was certain that he held the Boston batsmen in the palms of his hamlike hands, the distinguished Fenway populace became reconciled to the fact that Hippo was absolutely unapproachable. It was a fine touch of sportsmanship on the part of the Boston crowd. Babe Ruth and Sam Jones were for the time forgotten in the admiration of Vaughn's mound manoeuvres.

Hollocher Bungles Play.

A stupid bit of base running by Hollocher put a damper on a fine start which the Cubs made in the first inning. Jones was notably nervous at the start and passed Max Flack. Hollocher recovered his mislaid batting eye and walloped a single to centre field, landing Flack at second. Mann's sacrifice hit sent the runners along a station nearer home.

Dode Paskert thumped a terrific line smash toward left field, which Hollocher thought was a hit, although knowing just how Whiteman can play left field, there was no plausible reason for him thinking so. Flack stayed riveted at third while Whiteman ran over and corralled the liner, and then cut for home. Hollocher was so far off second base when the catch was made that he was foolishly doubled up at second before Flack had crossed the plate.

The Red Sox had two outs on the ledger in the third when the Cubs finally woke up to the fact that if they were going to do anything in this series, it was almost time to start. Hollocher faced Jones, with two gone, and drew a pass. He took a dangerous lead off first base, and Jones whipped the ball over to first to catch him napping. Without McInnis knowing it, Holly was on his way to second, and Stuffy, thinking that Holly was trying to get back to the base, stuck the ball down on the place where he thought the runner was, and the ball landed on nothing but atmosphere. The crowd then had its first laugh at McInnis's expense, for Stuffy has furnished most of the driving power in the Red Sox machine thus far.

With Hollocher safely perched on second, Leslie Mann jammed a scorching drive close along the foul line to left field and Holly galloped home. With this lead of one run, the Cubs for the first time sat up and began to take notice. They quickly became fired with the thrill of victory, and handled the Boston attack with the fine touch of masters of their craft.

The best punch of the Red Sox came in the fourth when Amos Strunk propelled a terrific two-bagger to the right field stockade. Strunk never progressed beyond second, for after Whiteman had popped a bunt fly to Merkle, McInnis shot a white hot liner which almost knocked off Merkle's hands as he grabbed it and the unwary Strunk was doubled off second.

That one run of the Cubs looked sizable enough as the game progressed, but they kept picking and hammering at Sam Jones until they again broke through his service for some more tallies in the eighth. Opening the eighth, Max Flack got a pass and went to second on Hollocher's infield hit. This tap by Holly landed along the third-base line and rolled along close to the chalked line. Thomas stood above it and implored and prayed that it would roll over the line into foul territory. The ball refused to roll foul.

It began to look decidedly gloomy for Jones, for he turned his head toward right field and saw Carl Mays, Pertica and Jean Dubuc all warming up as if vying with one another for the chance to shove Jones off the mound. Mann hoisted a fly to Shean and Dode Paskert came up with trouble in his eyes. Dode has not been able to hit his regular batting stride in the series and he chose this time and place to get his revenge on the ball.

Paskert Scores Two Runs.

Paskert jammed a whizzing liner between left and centre fields, the ball going through only uninhabited sectors until it had spent all its vitality against the fence. Flack and Hollocher had a pretty foot race for the plate and they both crossed the platter a few feet apart and Paskert was posing on second base before the agile outfielders had retrieved the ball.

Merkle chose this critical moment to strike out, something which wasn't very clubby on Fred's part. Charley Pick got another one of his near hits, a grounder getting badly confused in the midst of Dave Shean's feet at second base. Dave appeared to have been able to get all his feet out of the way of the ball except one, which sent the ball hopping out of reach.

Paskert hurried to third on the tap, and as soon as he detected that the ball and Shean's feet were on such bad terms he decided to make it a thorough trip to the plate. This was an unsound decision, Dode, for Shean soon recovered the ball and whipped it to the plate. Dode saw that advancement on that end was cut off, so he stopped and decided to go back to third.

Traffic at that end was also blocked, so Paskert had to keep moving up and down the base line while the Red Sox infield had a game of bean bag with the ball. Finally into the tossing carnival came Stuffy McInnis, who decided that the foolish business had gone far enough, and he stabbed Dode with the ball in a manner which was far, far from delicate.

Unless the players are seized with another attack of forensic flight, and provided, of course, that the walking delegates permit it, the two clubs will grapple again tomorrow and every day thereafter until some decision is reached. The receipts of today's and tomorrow's game are welcomed by the club owners, who have planned to invest in some coal for the Winter.

PLAN CUE TITLE EVENTS.

The billiard season will be formally ushered in next month, according to the dates selected for the various national amateur tournaments at the meeting of the Executive Committee of the American Amateur Billiard Association in the Claridge last night. It was decided this year to hold tournaments as early as possible. It is expected that the new regulations calling the nation's man power between the ages of 18 and 46 will draw heavily on the sport, and for this reason early dates were adopted. The tournaments will follow each other closely and bring play right up to March, 1919.

The opening tournament will be the novice straight rail event. This is for players of lesser abilities, and includes those who average three at balkline. Tentative arrangements call for elimination games at the local rooms to select representatives, beginning Oct. 1. This will be followed with a round robin tournament until the final round is reached, and the play will be concluded in Canfield's Academy, 181st Street and St. Nicholas Avenue.

The Class A balkline championship was awarded to Maurice Daly's Academy, Seventh Avenue and Forty-ninth Street, and will commence Jan. 6. The Morningside Academy, 125th Street and St. Nicholas Avenue, received the Class B tournament, which will start Dec. 2. The Class C title event, starting Nov. 6, was awarded to Osborne's Academy, 181st Street and Broadway.

Thum's Academy, Broadway and Thirty-first Street, was awarded the Class A three-cushion tournament, while John Doyle received the Class A pocket billiard championship.

In addition to these fixtures it is planned to hold an intercity tournament between players of Philadelphia and New York. There will be teams of three men each, playing alternately in both cities, and the proceeds will go to the Coin Box Fund, which supplies billiard paraphernalia to local army and navy camps. The series will be at 1,800 points.

Those who attended the meeting were Hal B. Coleman, William Gershel, John Lewis, Moe Isaacs, David Weiner, and E. E. Watrous of the Executive Committee, and Maurice Daly, John Doyle, F. C. Osborne, L. L. Strauss, Clarkson Townsend, of Boston, and representatives of Canfield's Academy and Fuller's Academy.

NATIONAL ANTHEM OPENS THE AFFRAY

Lively Battle Waged in Which Hippo Vaughn Is Controlling Factor Throughout.

BOSTON, Sept. 10.—The band played "The Star Spangled Banner" while the players and spectators stood with bared heads. Vaughn pitched for the Cubs, while Sam Jones, Boston's right-hander, was the selection for Boston.

The game in detail:

FIRST INNING.—Cubs—Jones lost control and Flack walked. Hollocher singled over second, Flack going to second. Mays began to warm up for Boston. Mann sacrificed, Jones to Shean, Flack going to third and Hollocher to second. The Red Sox infield played back. A double play ended the inning. Paskert lined out to Whiteman, who threw to Shean at second, doubling Hollocher. NO RUNS, ONE HIT. NO ERRORS.

SECOND INNING.—Cubs—Jones kept the ball low on Merkle, who is a high ball hitter. Merkle ran the count to two and three and finally walked. Pick grounded out to McInnis, while Merkle was running to second. It was an attempt at the hit and run. Deal popped to Scott. Jones knocked down Killifer's grounder and threw him out. Hollocher made a nice play on Scott's grounder, getting his man at first. Vaughn knocked down Thomas's grasser and threw him out. It was a pretty stop with his bare hand. NO RUNS, NO HITS, NO ERRORS.

THIRD INNING.—Cubs—Scott threw out Vaughn. Scott made a beautiful play on Flack's sharp drive and got him at first. Hollocher walked on four straight balls. Agnew tried to pick Hollocher off first with a quick throw, but Hollocher dashed for second, and the crowd gave McInnis the laugh when he turned and expected to tag Hollocher going back to first. Hollocher scored on Mann's double to left. Hollocher was credited with a stolen base. Scott threw out Paskert. ONE RUN. ONE HIT. NO ERRORS.

THIRD INNING.—Red Sox—Hollocher took Agnew's grounder and threw him out. Jones walked. Hooper was a strike-out victim. Shean hoisted to Paskert. NO RUNS. NO HITS. NO ERRORS.

FOURTH INNING.—Cubs—Merkle sent a hard liner right into Strunk's hands. Pick popped to Thomas. Deal filed out to Strunk. NO RUNS. NO HITS. NO ERRORS.

SEVENTH INNING.—Cubs—Deal struck out on three pitched balls. Killifer hit a line drive into Jones's hands. The crowd gave Vaughn a big cheer as he came to bat. He had pitched great ball and had the red-hosed players completely baffled. Vaughn had plenty of speed and fine control. Vaughn whiffed. NO RUNS, NO HITS, NO ERRORS.

He ran up a steep embankment, fell down at the top, recovered himself and caught the ball sitting down. Hollocher robbed Hooper of a hit, taking his fly ball after a hard run. Shean got an infield hit. Hollocher was only able to knock it down. Strunk struck out. NO RUNS, ONE HIT, NO ERRORS.

$120 HORSE WINS BIG RACE.

Prince Loree Captures $10,000 Stake on Syracuse Track.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Sept. 10.—Prince Loree, a brown gelding, purchased two years ago for $120 by Captain David Shaw of Cleveland, Ohio, won the $10,000 stake for 2:12 trotters at the State Fair today after one of the most sensational struggles in the history of this Eastern classic of the Grand Circuit. The winner's share of the purse was $4,750.

Periscope won the race for two-year-old trotters, with firsts in the last two heats, beating out Princess Etawah.

SENIORS VIE FOR LAURELS ON LINKS

Men of Affairs from All Sections of the Country Play in Annual Tourney.

There was that in their mien that laughed time to scorn, those links warriors who gathered nearly 200 strong to start the second annual tournament of the Seniors' Golf Association at the Apawamis Club yesterday. In the first half of the field which will continue in possession today and then step aside in favor of the second section, are men of affairs from all parts of the country. They include professional men, judges, financiers and men of the cloth.

Horace L. Hotchkiss, familiary known as "father of the seniors" because if was he who was instrumental in getting up the first veteran's tournament at Rye in 1905, was one of the starters. He is now the honorary president of the Seniors' Association, the president being Darwin P. Kingsley, years ago a St. Andrews frequenter, but latterly identified with the Sleepy Hollow Country Club. Incidentally, Kingsley again proved that he was a golfer by making the round in 89, the second best gross of the day.

The prize for the best net of the first half of the tourney seems as good as won by the Reverend J. Gray Bolton, of the Philadelphia Cricket Club, who returned a card of 99-30-69. Dr. Bolton is 71 years old.

The best gross of the day was easily the round of 82 by W. E. Truesdell, that reliable Garden City golfer who won chief honors in the tournament a year ago. After taking 39 to go out, Truesdell appeared in a fair way to get around in 80 or better, but a 7 at the eleventh and a 6 at the home hole represented five wasted strokes. As it was, his card read as follows:

Out	5	4	4	4	3	5	4	4	6—39
In	4	4	3	3	4	3	5	5	6—43—82

Interest in the driving competition, new this year, was maintained through out the day. The best early drive was 198 yards by Alexander H. Revell of Chicago. Later Truesdell hit a 218-yard ball, and that remained supreme until the far-driving Joseph P. McFadden of Deal hit the rubber-core for 219 yards.

Contestants are grouped into four classes, A from 55 to 60, B from 61 to 65, C from 66 to 70, and D over 70.

The scores yesterday were as follows:

Rev. J. Gray Bolton, Philadelphia Cricket, (D,) 99, 30—69; Percy H. Clafin, Tedesco, (B,) 94, 20—74; George Wright, Wollaston, (D,) 90, 16—74; J. W. Sothern, Siwanoy, (A,) 97, 22—75; John H. ADVERTISERS WIN AT GOLF.

Philadelphia Team Swamped by New York Players.

Golfers of the New York Advertising Golf Association overwhelmed the Poor Richards of Philadelphia in their annual team match yesterday at the Sleepy Hollow Country Club. The local linksmen took all of eight matches played. This gives the New Yorkers their second leg on the Rodman Wanamaker Cup, the trophy at stake in the series. The Poor Richards have won one match and another ended in a tie. The next, and probably deciding match, will be played some time next month at the Merion C. C., Philadelphia.

A. C. Beakman defeated P. Donnelly, 5 and 4; Don M. Parker defeated R. Stewart, 5 and 4; W. C. Izor defeated Mr. Kimberley, 2 and 1; F. K. NATURALIST FIRST IN FAST MILE RACE

J. E. Widener's Gelding Takes Advantage of Bad Behavior of Fairy Wand.

There was a larger crowd than usual at Belmont Park yesterday in the hope of seeing the new three-year-old sensation, Sunny Slope, race in the Manhattan Handicap at a mile. Sunny Slope was withdrawn, however, but it is understood that he will again be seen under colors next Saturday. His absence left the event a very open one, with A. K. Macomber's Hand Grenade a slight favorite.

Gifford A. Cochran's Fairy Wand might have won easily if she had not run out at the turn, where she was two lengths in front of Joseph E. Widener's Naturalist, but this speedy filly only repeated her erratic behavior of last Thursday, when she bumped every horse in the race and was disqualified.

After Fairy Wand had taken to the timbers Naturalist had matters all his own way, and reached the finishing post five lengths in front of Sun Flash II. in the fast time of 1:37 4-5. Fairy Wand showed what a good filly she was by coming on again after being straightened out to take third money, only a neck behind Sun Flash II.

Kitchen Hardware Selling.

Among hardware lines perhaps the most active at present is kitchen hardware. Cooking utensils of many varieties and all in substantial quantities are moving rapidly over the retail counter, and there is the consequent demand for supplies of this sort from wholesale distributers to keep stocks intact. As in practically all other lines, prices are a good deal higher than they were a year ago. Thus the volume of business in dollars and cents is rapidly mounting and is expected to far surpass last season's record.

Less Fur Trimming Wanted.

Where reorders for women's Fall suits have already been received it is quite noticeable that fur trimming does not come in for frequent mention as it did in the great majority of original orders. In explanation of this one manufacturer pointed out that most women have a fur neckpiece which they are anxious to wear and which in most cases would probably not match up with the fur trimming on the suit which they wanted. "Even if they did match," he continued, "a stole is superfluous with a fur-trimmed collar and usually a woman does not care to lay a beautiful stole aside. Especially is this true when fur prices are so high that the difference in cost between a suit with fur trimming and the same suit without it is very considerable."

Soft Felt Hats vs. Derbies.

The tendency toward derbies mentioned recently in The Times should have indicated rather that the proportion of derbies to soft felts sold has been greater than usual, than that more derbies than soft felts, in point of actual numbers had been disposed of. Inquiry develops that this is still true in many cases among high-priced hats, though in the medium and popular-priced lines no such condition is found to prevail. In all lines business in Fall hats is progressing well, and few retailers are indulging in pessimistic predictions for the season.

More Fall Business in Dresses.

Buyers seeking additional supplies of women's dresses for Fall are beginning to arrive in town, and show room business is becoming more active. It is said retailers have found that dresses of too elaborate design are not over enthusiastically received by women generally, while on the other hand there is equally evident a coolness toward dresses too plain and unadorned. The taste of the average woman this year seems to be striking a happy medium between the two extremes of fashion, and buyers are acting accordingly in reordering.

Gray Goods Sales Still Light.

Gray goods sales continued light in this market yesterday, but it was due more to the unwillingness of sellers to sell than of buyers to buy. A number of bids were again made for staple goods wanted for shipment through this month and next—some were wanted for delivery straight through to the end of the year—but sellers were not receptive. Two reasons were advanced for this. In the case of second hands it was because they look for still higher prices as a result of the condition of the cotton market. In the case of the mills it was because of the War Industries Board's attitude toward advance selling at prices to be revised later. The mills also are looking for higher prices when the new set comes out, and, consequently, prefer not to trade for the time being.

Fancy Lines Are Cut Down.

One of the features of the newer brassières that have been put on the market for the current season is the elimination of several of the "dressy" models in favor of those designed primarily for utility. Goods of the bandeaux type are still topping the demand, and the call for the brassières required for the conformation of stout figures continues with little sign of abatement. The tendency toward V-neck models is again very strong, though a good percentage of the present business is being done on "squares." Some of the more novel brassières are made up with real sleeves, the main purpose of which appears to be to supply grounds on which to fasten shields. As in other lines, the question of deliveries is paramount. Reports of advance business being taken for Spring are heard in some quarters.

Buyers Shopping Around.

While it is evident from the business taken by the manufacturers of children's garments that the parents of the country are not going to stint their offspring this Fall, no matter how much they economize on their own clothes, reports from the trade say that buyers are showing more of a disposition to shop around this season than has heretofore been the case in this line. From all accounts, there is good reason for this action, for it is asserted that prices in various quarters of the trade show more variance than is ordinarily seen. While prices on the finished goods are higher than they were, this condition and the variance of quotations are said to be due less to the advanced cost of labor than to the fabric situation. Houses which had sufficient capital to take advantage of the cloth market when it was lower are having things pretty much their own way now, while those less fortunately situated are finding their work cut out for them in interesting buyers.

Corset Orders Narrowed.

A survey of the business done on Fall lines of corsets to date is said by men who know to show a concentration of orders on standard numbers and brands, against the hit-or-miss methods of buying that have prevailed in the past. One factor in this situation is the view of manufacturers' prices, which has made it necessary to curtail purchases or increase the department's appropriation. This has led to the elimination of duplicate models from different producers. A second factor is the reduced supply of materials and labor and the consultant question of getting deliveries, which has caused buyers to put their eggs into as few baskets as possible and to favor the larger houses. The so-called staple lines are getting the bulk of buyers' attention, partly because of signs of economy on the part of consumers and partly because of the curtailment of fancy models in keeping with the views of the War Industries Board.

Says the "Crawlers" Are Busy.

According to the sales manager of a prominent local knit goods concern, this is the busy season for "crawlers," this being his name for retail buyers who severed relations with his concern some time ago, because it was a pioneer in price raising, and who are now trying to place orders with it because they can get the goods they want nowhere else. "Although we were one of the first concerns in our line to boost prices," he said yesterday, "we did not do it until we found we had to do so or sacrifice quality. Many buyers at that time—some of them big ones—did not have faith in us and took their business elsewhere. Now that goods are scarce and we seem better fixed than our competitors, they are crawling back and trying to get preference over accounts that stuck, or over ones we got to replace those we lost. However, there is strictly 'nothing doing.' We shall sell no new or inactive accounts while the shortage lasts."

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Stocks Sag Off Again, but Close Well Above Lowest Prices for the Day.

The third dip in the process of readjusting the stock market to the new situation created by the decision of the money committee against allowing any increase in the amount of funds available for speculation came early in the session yesterday, and at one time had prices down a point or more. It passed even more quickly than the two previous breaks and a subsequent recovery wiped out a good part of the declines without quite restoring the old level. Once more the bulk of the selling fell upon Steel common, which, on a turnover of close to 200,000 shares made a new low for this movement at 107⅞. By 3 o'clock it had rallied a full point and a half ,and the final quotation was almost unchanged.

There were fresh rumors yesterday of further action to be taken by the Money Committee and the authorities of the Stock Exchange, but no news. The committee has hardly had time yet to formulate a fair idea of the extent to which stock market trading has been absorbing bank funds, and there was no evidence of pressure being brought to bear through the calling of loans to hasten the liquidation of extended speculative accounts. As a matter of fact, the market has long been unusually well fortified, and the rise which was halted by Governor Strong's letter had not reached the point where it constituted a menace to the banking position. It remains to be seen, of course, whether the committee will be satisfied with the results already achieved, or whether further contraction will be thought desirable. The impression in brokerage circles is that the purpose of the warning has been well served, and that with the new Liberty Loan campaign but a little more than two weeks away, no further efforts will be made that might tend to discourage investment.

Announcement by the capital issues committee that no further applications for permission to do corporate financing will be acted upon until the Government loan is out of the way will give the bond distributing houses an opportunity to clean up pending issues and free their organizations for the work they will be called upon to perform in placing the Liberty bonds. The campaign machinery has been preserved, and it is believed that the new offering can be handled even more expeditiously than the last one, with a still wider circle of subscribers.

Procter & Gamble Earn $9,719,804.

The Procter & Gamble Company reports gross sales amounting to $176,920,519 in the year ended June 30, an increase of $48,370,870 over the preceding year. These figures include the results of constituent companies. After paying expenses, taxes, and other charges, a net income of $9,719,804 remained, compared with $7,056,494. The profit was equal to nearly $40 a share of common stock after allowing for the dividend on $2,250,000 preferred.

Trading on the Stock Exchange was generally quiet. Home funds and other allied issues were firm. Argentine rails recovered. Shipping stocks were reactionary. American breweries were weak on the announcement that American breweries were to be closed. Other sections of the market were uninteresting.

INTERBORO EARNINGS GAIN 179% IN DECADE

President Shonts Says That Profits Grew Faster Than Gross Revenues.

$33,400,000 NOTES OFFERED

Three-Year 7 Per Cent. Securities to be Sold at 98½ and Yield About 7½ Per Cent.

With the announcement yesterday that subscription books to the $33,400,000 offering of Interborough Rapid Transit Company's three-year 7 per cent. secured convertible notes would be opened this morning at the office of J. P. Morgan & Co., there was made public President Theodore P. Shonts's letter to the bankers, stating that during the ten-year period, 1907-1917, the company's gross revenues had increased 74 per cent. and that its net income available for interest on bonds had increased 179 per cent.

The three-year 7 per cent. bonds are being offered at 98½ and interest, to yield about 7½ per cent. They are convertible, at the option of the holder, into Interborough first and refunding mortgage 5 per cent. bonds at 87½, with adjustment of interest. The notes are redeemable at the option of the company, at 103 if prior to Sept. 1, 1919; 102 if thereafter and prior to Sept. 1, 1920, and 101, if thereafter and prior to maturity.

"The $33,400,000 notes are to be secured by pledge under a collateral indenture, with the Bankers Trust Company, Trustee, of $52,187,000 Interborough Rapid Transit Company first and refunding mortgage 5 per cent. bonds, (the bonds being thus pledged at a price of 64 per cent.)

"Except for work to cost about $6,000,000, which is to be deferred until after the war, the proceeds of this note issue will be sufficient to complete the company's contribution to the cost of the Interborough new rapid transit system, while the city has yet to provide about $40,000,000 to complete its contribution.

"During the ten-year period 1907-1917, in which the older subway was operated as a complete unit, and under normal conditions, the company's gross revenue increased from $22,902,579 to $39,866,146, or 74 per cent., and the net income available for interest on its bonds increased from $4,483,110 to $12,514,996, or 179 per cent. This experience of the past would justify the expectation of continuing expansion of traffic and earnings of the enlarged system, although a period of transition is to be anticipated during which the dense traffic currents shift from the old-established routes to the new ones.

"Under its contracts with the city, the company is entitled to take, on the basis of this note issue, out of the revenues of the Interborough Rapid Transit system, an annual sum, which with other corporate income, will provide $17,207,572, as compared with $11,973,100 required for interest on all bonds and notes outstanding in the hands of the public and sinking fund on all bonds exclusive of the pledged bonds. It is estimated by independent engineers that, with the present rate of fare, the total net income available to the company will be $12,440,000 in 1919, increasing to $17,480,000 in 1922, as compared with $11,520,000 required for estimated interest and sinking fund charges payable out of income in 1919. This estimate of earnings is based on a five cent fare, and the engineers state that in making the estimates full allowance has been made for the unfavorable conditions brought about by the war.

"The earnings for 1918 are exclusive of $2,508,508, on account of the partial operation of new lines for which the company is entitled to be reimbursed, with interest, out of future revenues. The above earnings, (except for a small period of 1918,) have been derived entirely from the operation of the elevated lines and the older subway system, the latter representing an investment by the company of approximately $48,000,000 and by the city of approximately $59,500,000. These earnings include substantially no income from the enlarged rapid transit facilities built during the last five years, for the construction and equipment of which the company has provided approximately $130,000,000 of additional funds, while the city has provided more than $60,000,000 and will, it is estimated, provide approximately $100,000,000 upon the completion of the Interborough subways.

"The increased cost of operation during 1918 reflects conditions which are common to similar enterprises throughout the country, as a consequence of the war, and in view thereof the company has made an application for an increase in fare, which is now pending before the public authorities. The granting of this necessary increase would enable the city to obtain sooner a return upon its investment in the new interborough subways."

The offering of Interborough's notes is made under the names of J. P. Morgan & Co., First National Bank, the National City Company, Harris, Forbes & Co., Lee, Higginson & Co., Kissel, Kinnicutt & Co., and Halsey, Stuart & Co.

$2,500,000 I. R. T. WAGE RISE.

New York Railways Company Workers Get $1,250,000 Increase.

The increased wage scales of the Interborough Rapid Transit Company and of the New York Railways Company were made public yesterday by Theodore P. Shonts, President of both companies. The total increases granted the 22,000 employes of the companies aggregate $3,750,000 a year. Of this amount $2,500,000 goes to the 15,000 employes of the Interborough Company, and the remainder is divided among the 7,500 employes of the Railways Company. The average increase in wages amounts to 20 per cent.

In announcing the higher wages, Mr. Shonts said that they were granted in anticipation of receiving authorization to charge more for fares on all of the lines of both companies, which include the elevated, subway, and surface roads. He added that the expenses of operating railroads this year would probably be one-third more than last year.

The American Gets Less Than 10 Per Cent. of Profits from War Materials.

TOTAL SALES $80,588,070

Taxes Amount to $4,018,951, an Increase of More Than 82 Per Cent. Over the 1917 Year.

The American Locomotive Company, which was a large manufacturer of munitions in 1916, shows in its report for the fiscal period ended June 30 that less than 10 per cent. of the profit came from war materials. A natural reduction of gross business resulted from the absence of important war orders, the turnover amounting to $80,588,070, a decline of $1,625,775 from the previous year. Taxes amounted to $4,018,951, an increase of more than 82 per cent. over the 1917 year and included, besides the Canadian war imposts and United States Government taxes, a reservation of $1,400,000 in anticipation of the expected expansion of taxation under the forthcoming Revenue bill.

The balance for dividends was $5,911,137, and the $4,161,137 available for the common stock was equal to $16.64 a share, against $21.80 the year before. After paying dividends, the management set aside $1,000,000 for betterments and additions, leaving a surplus of nearly $2,000,000 for the year. The salient features of the statement, issued yesterday, are presented in this table:

Exp., dep., &c.	70,358,565	72,614,654
Taxes	4,018,951	2,205,319
Balance for Divid.	5,911,137	7,201,680
Year's surplus	1,911,137	1,051,680
Total surplus	17,828,506	15,917,369

Andrew Fletcher, President, said that all the plants had been busy on locomotives since war orders were finished in August of last year. Last Autumn, he stated, an order was received for 150 locomotives for use of the armies in France and the Railroad Administration on April 30 last ordered 800 of standard design for American railroads.

"The plants of the locomotive builders of this country will be taxed to their maximum capacity during the war," Mr. Fletcher added, "and probably for some time thereafter, to supply the requirements of the railroads operated by the United States Railroad Administration, industrial plants engaged in manufacturing war essentials and to meet the demands of our Government and its allies for foreign service. It is believed that the standardization of locomotive design for domestic railroads will be a substantial factor in obtaining maximum tonnage production from the plants of the various builders."

The report showed that the company had more than $25,000,000 worth of supplies on hand at the end of the year, compared with about $11,000,000 a year before, the increase being largely the result of advanced costs and the necessity of having a large quantity of materials to conduct the business. The management charged off $1,554,613 for depreciation, including the item in operating expenses. Drawings and patterns, previously carried at $981,182, were written down to $1. There was charged against the reserve of the preceding year for additions and betterments the sum of $3,131,249, which included the purchase price of a steel casting plant at Chester, Penn. At the end of the year unfilled orders aggregated $74,736,543, against $77,620,449 on June 30, 1917.

EGGS.—20,022 packages. Arrivals are liberal and the general market quiet. The great bulk of the supply consists of medium and ordinary qualities containing many lots of short-held goods, all of which are moving slowly, and it is difficult to realize owners' ideas of value. The higher qualities, containing a good to large proportion of new-laid goods are in tight supply and meeting a fair demand at sustained prices. High qualities of dirties and checks rule firmer, but many of the lots arriving are of ordinary quality and comparatively easy value. Nearby white eggs of extra fancy quality are working out fairly well in most stores, although some receivers report an accumulation of average fancy stock, and there is a surplus of medium and ordinary qualities. Interborough Rapid Transit Company

THREE YEAR SECURED CONVERTIBLE 7% GOLD NOTES

Dated September 1, 1918 Due September 1, 1921

Interest payable March 1 and September 1 in New York City
Coupon Notes in denominations of $1,000, $500 and $100.
Notes registerable as to principal

Convertible at the option of the holder, into Interborough Rapid Transit Company First and Refunding Mortgage 5% Bonds at 87½% with adjustment of interest.

Redeemable as a whole or in part, at the option of the Company, at 103%, if prior to September 1, 1919; at 102% if thereafter and prior to September 1, 1920; and at 101% if thereafter and prior to maturity, accrued interest also being payable in any case.

Interest payable without deduction for 2% of the Federal Income Taxes, which the Company may be required or permitted to pay at the source.
Approved by Public Service Commission, First District, State of New York.

From a letter of Theodore P. Shonts, Esq., President of the Company, stating the particulars in regard to the Notes, we summarize the following:

The $33,400,000 Notes are to be secured by pledge under a collateral indenture, with Bankers Trust Company, Trustee, of $52,187,000 Interborough Rapid Transit Company First and Refunding Mortgage 5% Bonds (the bonds being thus pledged at a price of 64%).

Except for work to cost about $6,000,000 which is to be deferred until after the war, the proceeds of this Note issue will be sufficient to complete the Company's contribution to the cost of the Interborough new rapid transit system, while the City has yet to provide about $40,000,000 to complete its contribution.

During the ten-year period 1907-1917, in which the older subway was operated as a complete unit, and under normal conditions, the Company's gross revenue increased from $22,902,579 to $39,866,146 or 74% and the net income available for interest on its bonds increased from $4,483,110 to $12,514,996 or 179%. This experience of the past would justify the expectation of continuing expansion of traffic and earnings of the enlarged system, although a period of transition is to be anticipated during which the dense traffic currents shift from the old-established routes to the new ones.

Under its contracts with the City, the Company is entitled to take, on the basis of this Note issue, out of the revenues of the Interborough rapid transit system, an annual sum which, with other corporate income, will provide $17,207,572, as compared with $11,973,100 required for interest on all bonds and notes outstanding in the hands of the public and sinking fund on all bonds exclusive of the pledged bonds. It is estimated by independent engineers that with the present rate of fare, the total net income available to the Company will be $12,440,000 in 1919, increasing to $17,480,000 in 1922, as compared with $11,520,000 required for estimated interest and sinking fund charges payable out of income in 1919. This estimate of earnings is based on a five cent fare, and the engineers state that in making the estimates, full allowance has been made for the unfavorable conditions brought about by the war.

During the last three years the earnings of the Interborough Rapid Transit Company available for interest and sinking fund charges, as compared with the interest and sinking fund chargeable against the Company's earnings, have been as follows!

Year Ended June 30	Gross Earnings	Income Available for Charges on Company's Bonds	Bond Interest and Sinking Fund Payable out of Income	Balance
1917	39,866,146	12,457,873	3,572,515	8,885,358
1918	40,497,728	9,428,756	4,765,998	4,662,758

The earnings for 1918 are exclusive of $2,508,508, on account of the partial operation of new lines for which the Company is entitled to be reimbursed, with interest, out of future revenues. The above earnings (except for a small period of 1918) have been derived entirely from the operation of the elevated lines and the older subway system, the latter representing an investment by the Company of approximately $48,000,000 and by the City of approximately $59,500,000. These earnings include substantially no income from the enlarged rapid transit facilities built during the last five years, for the construction and equipment of which the Company has provided approximately $130,000,000 of additional funds, while the City has provided more than $60,000,000 and will, it is estimated, provide approximately $100,000,000 upon the completion of the Interborough subways.

The increased cost of operation during 1918 reflects conditions which are common to similar enterprises throughout the country, as a consequence of the war, and in view thereof the Company has made an application for an increase in fare, which is now pending before the public authorities. The granting of this necessary increase would enable the City to obtain sooner a return upon its investment in the new Interborough subways.

THE ABOVE NOTES ARE OFFERED, SUBJECT TO ISSUE AS PLANNED, FOR SUBSCRIPTION AT 98½ AND INTEREST TO YIELD ABOUT 7½ PER CENT.

Subscription books will be opened at the office of J. P. Morgan & Co., at 10 o'clock, A. M., Wednesday, September 11, 1918. The right is reserved to reject any and all applications, and also, in any case, to award a smaller amount than applied for. The amount due on allotments will be payable at the office of J. P. Morgan & Co., in New York funds, the date of payment to be given in the notices of allotment. Temporary notes will be delivered pending the engraving of definitive notes.

GAINS IN COTTON SLIGHT AFTER FITFUL SESSION

Early Advances Caused by Strong Wave of Buying Lost Later—Net Gain 10 to 35 Points.

Cotton had another fitful day on the local market yesterday, and for a brief space a considerably more active one than on Monday. Starting off very much where it had left off, with prices showing from 8 points decline to 7 points advance, after some preliminary backing and filling a strong buying wave set in with its chief volume centred in December contracts, the demand for which for some time has been the feature of the current season.

Under this influence prices went forward rapidly in the morning trading, at the top registering gains of nearly a cent a pound from the low point of the early sales, and 85 to 70 odd points from Monday's close. It appeared, however, that most of the buying was done to cover short account, the previous short lines having been taken in by trade interests. As soon as this short interest had been disposed of both the volume of business and the quotations fell away together, and the afternoon was dull, nearly all the advance being lost and the closing being easy, at net advances of only 10 to 35 points over Monday's close. Yesterday's quotations follow:

CONSOLIDATED EXCHANGE

Stocks rallied in the last hour of the trading yesterday on the Consolidated Stock Exchange and, supported by a strong and sustained demand, practically made up the heavy losses suffered in the extended liquidation of the morning session. Final prices showed but fractional net losses, while several of the active issues scored small gains. The closing tone of the market was strong. Steel common was the leader in both the decline and the subsequent rally.

MAINE VOTE REVIVES REPUBLICAN HOPES

Penrose and Fess Say It Forecasts Result of Elections in November.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 10.—Republican leaders today expressed gratification over the Republican vote in Maine, and predicted that a similar condition would result in the November Congressional elections, assuring the election of a Republican House.

With the election in Maine before him as a criterion of sentiment in New England, Senator Lodge, Republican leader of the Senate, said New Hampshire would elect two Republican Senators in November, a Republican gain of one. J. L. Drew, appointed to succeed the late Senator Gallinger, is to be sworn in tomorrow.

Governor Henry W. Keyes of New Hampshire has been nominated by the Republicans for the long term, and George Moses of Concord, former Minister to Greece under President Taft, will be the Republican candidate for the place now held by Senator Hollis, Democrat, who is not a candidate for the nomination.

Representative Simeon D. Fess, Chairman of the Republican Congressional Committee, commenting upon the Maine election, said: "It shows a decided undercurrent toward the Republicans. The country approves their attitude and will rely upon them for wise conduct of the country's welfare. The vote in Maine confirms my prior statements, that the people of the country will certainly look to the Republicans for leadership in the responsible business of vigorous prosecution of the war and wise solution of the problems which the country must inherit from the war.

Senator Penrose, who conferred during the day with Senator Lodge and Representative Fess regarding political conditions, said:

"I share the opinion of Republicans with whom I have talked that the Maine result has impressive significance. The Republican nominee for Governor, who has many elements of weakness, and whose election was doubted by some of his freinds, had a surprising majority. In one Congressional district, where the Republican was elected two years ago by 400 majority, the returns show a majority of 2,000 yesterday.

"An analysis of the situation leads to the conclusion that there exists an inarticulated and unvoiced dissatisfactoin with the methods and inefficiency of the Democratic Party generally in the conduct of the war.

GOMPERS SUMMONS ALLIED LABOR HEADS

Asks Them to Meet Him in London to Discuss the British Memorandum on War Aims.

RENEWS LOYALTY PLEDGE

Autocracy Must Be Crushed, He Declares, and American Workmen Are in War Until Victory.

LONDON, Sept. 10.—The representatives of all the labor and Socialist organizations of the allied countries have been requested to meet in London next week in a conference called by Samuel Gompers, President of the American Federatoin of Labor, to discuss the views of the federatoin on the war and to ascertain the measure of their agreement with the British labor memorandum on war aims.

Mr. Gompers, in a statement made today prior to attending a reception at the American Luncheon Club, reiterated the determination of American labor not to recede from the attitude it had taken of refusing to meet the labor representatives of enemy countries until the war had been won.

"Our first business," said Mr. Gompers, "is to win the war and then negotiate. But imperialism and autocracy must be crushed for all time. No sacrifice is too great to achieve that end."

America's delay in entering the war was defended by Mr. Gompers, in his address at the Luncheon Club. Mr. Gompers said he was one of those who were impatient during the period while America was maintaining neutrality, but he had found that "the wisdom of the President of the United States far outbalanced the judgment of all else." He pledged American labor to stick through the war to a victorious end. The American workers, he declared, had no illusions regarding the conflict. They knew what the United States and the Allies were fighting for.

The workers of America did not only talk freedom, Mr. Gompers pointed out, but they had lived it. He had visited Germany several times, he added, and had never heard more tunes sung to freedom in any other country. But, he said, "mouthing it and practicing it are two different things."

Mr. Gompers declared that only men who were willing to make supreme sacrifices knew what freedom or liberty meant. He quoted the phrase, "Eternal vigilance is the price of liberty," and added that men who were unwilling to fight for liberty were undeserving of it. So far as England, France, Italy, and the United States were concerned, the speaker declared, their arming for war was not militarism, but a case of their civilian populations getting into uniform to defend the rights of civilization. They were uniformed so that they might distinguish between friend and enemy.

Mr. Gompers said he had appealed to his fellow-workers in Great Britain to do their job. They had done wonderfully, but, he added, this was a time that tried men's souls, and it was the bounden duty of all to insure that the war should not be lost or success in it endangered.

'DRYS' NAMED WHITMAN.

Incomplete Returns Give Him 5,845 Votes to 5,602 for Bishop.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Sept. 10.—Governor Whitman received the Prohibition nomination for Governor, according to incomplete returns filed with Secretary of State Hugo, but the Secretary himself was defeated for nomination by Ella L. McCarthy.

All the returns except those from Hamilton County were filed with the Secretary of State tonight. The Hamilton County returns will be incomplete until one district can be found. This will not change the result.

Whiteman received 5,845 votes and Olin S. Bishop of Utica 5,602. The five counties in Greater New York gave this prohibition vote for Governor:

County.	Bishop.	Whitman.
Bronx	66	27
Kings	271	187
New York	171	70
Queens	81	17
Totals	681	303

Eugene M. Travis, State Controller, received the Prohibition nomination for that office. Travis received 5,000 votes and his Prohibition opponent succeeded in getting only a small percentage of this number. The totals have not been computed.

B. R. T. SEEKS TO FORM 5-CENT FARE ZONES

New Surface Line Tariffs Filed with Service Board Double Rates to Suburbs.

New passenger tariffs filed with the Public Service Commission yesterday by the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company divided the surface lines of the company into two zones with a five-cent fare for each zone or a 10-cent fare for a ride in both zones. They also called for a modification of the transfer system so that transfers would be confined to each zone. The plan provided for the operation of the new schedules in thirty days, but the commission, at a meeting held last evening, issued an order deferring the new schedules for sixty days. In the meantime the commission will hold public hearings beginning Sept. 30 to determine whether to accept or reject new plan. The routes affected are:

Grand Street—One fare between Delancey Street, Manhattan, and Newtown Creek Bridge, and an additional fare between Newtown Creek Bridge and North Beach or Flushing.

LOSE B. R. T. JOBS.

Company Says Some Jews Lost Places by Observing Holidays.

The Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company yesterday issued a statement denying a published report that it had discharged 500 of its Jewish employes because they had remained away from their work to observe the Jewish holidays on last Saturday and Sunday. It was admitted, however, that twenty of the men had lost their employment for this reason.

"We did not discharge any men," it was stated for the company by one of its officials. "Less than twenty insisted that they must have the holidays on the ground of religion, and they really discharged themselves. The great majority of our Jewish employes not only worked on these holidays, but worked overtime. We found it impossible to give the time off to our Jewish employes this year because of war conditions and the shortage of men. We have between 700 and 800 Jews employed on our surface lines. To have given them the two days, a Saturday and a Sunday off, would have meant the temporary disruption of the system. A large majority of the men understood the situation and acquiesced in it.

"There were a few who, when permission for the holidays was refused, absented themselves and turned in their cards rather than work. It is ridiculous to speak of 500 men having been discharged. If we lost that number at one time some of our surface lines wou'd be out of business. There were actually less than twenty, and they were from various depots."

At a meeting of discharged employes in the club rooms of the Sixth Assembly District Socialistic Club, 157 Tompkins Avenue, Brooklyn, last night it was voted to have a personal talk with President Williams of the B. R. T. Chairman Paul Millman, one of the men, named a committee of six who will write to Mr. Williams asking for a n interview.

Good Prices for Abandoned Goods.

Good prices ruled yesterday at the Government's auction of abandoned and unclaimed merchandise at the Appraiser's Stores, Washington and Christopher Streets. During the day 547 lots were disposed of for $6,832.35. Dry goods predominated, with miscellaneous merchandise interspersed. The sale will be continued today.

BOARD OVERRULES PLAN TO STOP CARS AT NIGHT

The plan of John Candler Cobb of Boston to suspend the operation of all of the surface lines operated by the New York Railways Company from midnight to 6 o'clock in the morning was overruled yesterday by the Public Service Commission, which adopted an order making it impossible for the company to curtail the present service. Mr. Cobb represents more than 10,000 minority bondholders of the company. He is a member of the Board of Directors, and some months ago obtained permission from the board to stop the operation of the cars for a period during the night if he could.
